THREE MEMBERS TO DECIDE OTTAWA VOTE

ALBERTA CAMPAIGN INTENSIFIED AS DATE OF VOTE COMES ON

Candidates, With Only To-morrow Left for Speeches Before Polling on Monday, Concentrate Efforts; Edmonton Audiences Hear Practically All Big Figures; 184 Candidates for the Sixty Seats in Legislature

Edmonton, June 25.—With only one day left for active campaigning after to-day, Edmonton's eighteen aspirants for seats in the Legislature of Alberta and the other candidates throughout central and northern parts of the province are feverishly working. During the final week, Edmonton voters have heard practically all the big figures of the three parties, with the result that there has been a decided increase in the interest taken in the campaign.

A spectacular wind-up is promised for to-morrow, when Joe Clarke, stormy petrel of the political arena, will engage in a joint debate with Hon. J. F. Lymburn, Attorney-General and candidate for one of the five Edmonton seats.

First ballots in the election were cast yesterday afternoon, when the advance polls opened.

The general polling throughout the province will take place next Monday. For the sixty seats in the Legislature there are 184 candidates in the province.

The Farmer Government, which is appealing for a renewed mandate, is led by Premier J. E. Brownlee. The United Farmers of Alberta have been in power since 1921.

CALGARY CAMPAIGN
Calgary, June 25.—With the end of the Alberta provincial election campaign in sight, Calgary candidates are concentrating their efforts to arouse a little more enthusiasm in the political issues to be voted on next Monday, but with indifferent success. Political meetings have been sparsely attended, possibly on account of the continued rainy weather, and so far the campaign has produced no surprises, except the falling out of Alderman E. H. Parkyn with the Labor Party and a verbal sparring bout he had with Alex Ross, Minister of Labor and Public Works, who is running here on the Labor nomination.

NAVIES COMPARED ON A NEW BASIS

Disarmament Delegates at Geneva Abandon Class Tonnage Principle

Geneva, June 25.—The underlying principle of the naval experts who have been discussing the question of disarmament, it was helped to a quick fall by the nations of Continental Europe, who virtually acted as a bloc under the leadership of France and Italy.

The principle is known as a comparison of the naval strength of the various nations by taking into account the total tonnage of the various types of warships, as for example, battleships.

DECLARED UNFAIR

At the forenoon session here yesterday the naval experts who have been discussing the question of disarmament, it was helped to a quick fall by the nations of Continental Europe, who virtually acted as a bloc under the leadership of France and Italy.

All the big naval powers, except France and Italy, backed up the contention of the United States that class tonnage should be regarded as the one standard of comparison of the strength of navies. The countries which voted with the United States were Great Britain, Japan, Argentina, Chile and Spain.

ANSWERED QUESTION

Having rejected the United States proposal in the forenoon, France and Italy presented another resolution in the afternoon. The naval men were asked to vote on the following: "Do you believe a system of comparison of the naval armaments of one country with the naval armaments of another country, based on a standard of tonnage of each class, is a method capable of general application, which is just and fair for all nations and therefore acceptable?"

Japan and Argentina voted "yes," but the British, United States, Chile, German and Dutch delegations abstained from voting. Twelve other countries, including France and Italy, voted "No."

Bombs Thrown In Bulgar Town

Paris, June 25.—A Havas dispatch from Sofia says four bombs were thrown in the town of Petrich last night, five persons being wounded. The bombs were hurled by unknown persons, who succeeded in escaping toward the frontier.

Shapurji Saklatvala Addresses Commons After His Term in Prison

London, June 25.—Persistent interruptions by Labor members to-day during the course of a debate in the House of Commons on a motion to revoke the British trade agreement with Russia resulted in suspension of the sitting by Deputy Speaker Hope, who was presiding.

The debate was featured by the sudden appearance of Shapurji Saklatvala, only Communist member of the Commons, who came straight to the House of Commons, who came straight to the House of Commons, who came straight to the House of Commons.

SOCIETY ACCUSED
Madrid, June 25.—The Spanish Government to-day accused the Ateneo, foremost cultural and literary society in Spain, of fomenting rebellion and conspiring against the Government.

The Gazette, official Government organ, has published a royal order appointing a new board of governors for the society to carry on its affairs temporarily and has suspended the holding of general meetings.

Searchers Found Kidnappers' Shack, Declares Report

Douglas, Ariz., June 25.—An unconfirmed report received here this afternoon said James Randolph, race-track driver and an operative for a film company whose name was not learned, had located the shack in Sonora, Mexico, in which Almie Semple McPherson said she was held prisoner by three abductors.

When the Los Angeles evangelist was notified of the supposed finding she was overcome with joy. "Thank God, thank God," she exclaimed, and closed her eyes and her lips uttered a prayer.

British Team Met Red Tape at Blaine, Wash.; Allowed to Visit United States

New Westminster, June 25.—Members of the British soccer team which is touring Canada were held up at Blaine, Wash., south of here on the international boundary, for nearly two hours to-day when they attempted to cross the border on an automobile trip to Bellingham.

DR. F. G. BANTING APPEALS TO CANADIANS TO SUPPORT MULOCK RESEARCH FUND

Discoverer of Insulin Addresses Canadian Medical Association; Credits Most Advancement in Medical Knowledge to Observations of General Practitioners

Dr. Frederick G. Banting, distinguished co-discoverer of insulin, this morning discussed medical research, its problems and attainments, in a brilliant address before the Canadian Medical Association Convention at the Empress Hotel, which he closed with an appeal for support for the new Research Foundation of Canada, recently initiated by Sir William Mulock and associates, to enable Canadians to pursue their studies in Canada.

There is no more important phase of medical science than medical research. Were it not for medical research there would be no excuse for the existence of the Canadian Medical Association or need for annual meetings.

BROAD FIELD
Medical research is a broad field. Having been a practitioner myself and realizing the difficulties that must be overcome in the transaction of research, I have endeavored in this paper to treat the subject of medical research from the standpoint of a general practitioner in the hope that helpful suggestions may be given to all such who are here to-day.

Medical research presents problems for the chemist, the biochemist, the physicist, the biologist, the economist, cut closer than any of these for the physician. Most of the outstanding contributions to medical science have been made by general practitioners. Harvey, Sydenham, Addison and MacKenzie were not only outstanding physicians of their own day but because of research work their names will live. We have but to read the writings of such men to learn the secret of their success. They were invariably workers and thinkers, and accurate observers. They observed every sign and symptom of disease and then by weight of clinical experience made deductions and elaborated theories. To-day I think we sometimes get lost in a maze of less important details and lose sight of the main issue. E. I. Scott in 1912, in his search for the internal secretion of the pancreas, endeavored to ligate the pancreatic ducts, but not being satisfied with the methods of blood sugar analysis then available, he abandoned his search in order to obtain a more accurate method for the estimation of sugar in the blood. Roux and Yersen were on the verge of producing diphtheria antitoxin, but while they were elaborating details von Bering made practical use of their theory and was the first to produce diphtheria antitoxin.

FIRST HAND OBSERVATIONS
The general practitioner is closely in touch with patients suffering from all manner of diseases. He has the opportunity of making first hand observations of signs and symptoms of these diseases and sure that the (Concluded on page 14)

HAGUE CONFERENCE ON LAWS IS URGED

Purpose Would be Codification of Recognized International Rules

Washington, June 25.—With approval by the House foreign affairs committee yesterday of the Tinkham resolution, proposing a third Hague Conference, Chairman Porter made public a letter from the Secretary of States, Kellogg, recommending participation by the United States in such a conference under conditions.

The resolution would request President Coolidge to call another conference at The Hague for codification of international law.

Mr. Kellogg disclosed that as early as a year ago the State Department had been approached informally by The Netherlands Government on the subject and that he had informed the Netherlands that the United States would give its "best" approval of and co-operation in a third peace conference to be called by The Netherlands Government at a convenient time for the sole purpose of promoting the codification of the international laws of peace.

Arthur Fonsonby, who was Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs in the Labor Government, deplored recent speeches by Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill and Lord Birkenhead.

MAYOR PENDRAY RETURNS FROM BIG SPOKANE GATHERING

Law Abiding Canada Warmly Praised by Northwest Police Officials

Mayor Pendray and Mrs. B. Landes, Seattle Mayor's Wife, Cheered to Echo

After attending the sixth annual anti-crime conference of the Northwest Association of Sheriffs and Police at Victoria's Chief Magistrate, Mayor J. C. Pendray returned to his office at the City Hall to-day.

British law enforcement and the high standard of training and efficiency reached by Royal Canadian Mounted Police and other bodies in the Dominion came in for unqualified praise at the convention, Mayor Pendray told The Times on his return.

On every hand that administration of justice in Canada was lauded, as the great volume of public support behind law officers in the British Empire. Speakers of nationally known calibre in police affairs pointed to the efficacy of the training system for police officers such as exemplified in its highest state in the Royal Canadian Mounted and the Provincial Police forces of this Dominion. It was this training which made the enforcement of law a matter of certainty, and evoked the wide measure of public support, which was the real motive power behind all statutes, they said.

Speakers at the four-day conference stressed the growing tide of lawlessness in certain sections of the United States, and pointed to what they said was entire lack of realization of the situation on the part of the public at large. Police methods would have to be overhauled and brought up to date to keep abreast of organized crime, and the growing (Concluded on page 5)

Ottawa, June 25.—A substantial increase in Canada's immigration in April, 1926, over April, 1925, is shown in a statement issued to-day by the Department of Immigration and Colonization. The total immigration during April amounted to 17,693, as compared with 16,884 during April a year ago. In April last British immigration totaled 7,897, immigrants from the United States 2,007, and from other countries 7,689.

CENTRE OF MUCH INTEREST IN HOUSE; AGNES MacPHAIL

One of three Progressive members on whose votes is reported to depend the division in the House of Commons to-night on the customs inquiry report, Miss MacPhail, member for Southeast Grey, Ontario, is a prominent figure in Ottawa to-day.

M. N. CAMPBELL ASKED CLEMENCY FOR AN OFFENDER

Ottawa, June 25 (Canadian Press).—Milton N. Campbell, Progressive, Mackenzie, Saskatchewan, who to-day announced his intention of voting against the Government, on the customs inquiry report, applied to the Minister of Customs within the last two months for clemency on behalf of a "home brew" offender.

Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Railways, made this announcement in the House this afternoon. The Minister of Railways then pointed out that the offence for which the House was asked to censure Hon. G. H. Boivin was the same as Mr. Campbell had asked him to commit.

GREAT FOREST FIRE RAGES IN OREGON

Much Damage Done in Timber Area Near Klamath Falls

Klamath Falls, Ore., June 25.—Completely out of control, the largest forest fire in the vicinity of Klamath Falls during the past two years was doing thousands of dollars' worth of damage to-day, fifteen miles south-west of this city.

The fire was in the midst of a virgity stand of yellow pine timber, owned by the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company.

HOUSE DIVISION NARROWS TO SLIGHT MARGIN

Present Reports in Ottawa Are That Miss McPhail and Messrs. D. M. Kennedy and G. G. Coote Hold Key to Outcome of Vote in Commons To-night on Report of Customs Inquiry Committee; Full Duncan Report Tabled

Ottawa, June 25.—Three Progressive members hold the balance in to-night's critical division in the House. They are Miss Agnes MacPhail, Southeast Grey, Ontario; D. M. Kennedy, Peace River, Alberta; and G. G. Coote, Macleod, Alberta.

On the way they vote, it is calculated, will depend whether the Government is upheld on the division on the report of the customs inquiry committee.

So far, three Progressives, Messrs. Lucas, Camrose, Alberta, Boutillier, Vegreville, Alberta, and Campbell, Mackenzie, Saskatchewan, have indicated their intention of voting with the Opposition. If the three indicated should also vote with the Conservatives the division, unless there should be further unpaired absentees, would break even, with the Speaker holding the casting vote. But it is thought probable that if the three should vote with the Opposition, other Progressives would vote with the Opposition also. In that case the Government would be defeated.

If the Government should be defeated it would be the first Government to be defeated in the House since Confederation.

REPORT Tabled

Ottawa, June 25.—The proceedings in the House to-day opened with the tabling of the full report made by Walter Duncan, after his investigation of customs service affairs in the Montreal district.

Dugald Donaghy, Liberal, North Vancouver, asked for unanimous consent for tabling the report. No objection was raised.

M. N. Campbell, Progressive, Mackenzie, Saskatchewan, resumed the debate on the customs report. He said there had been revealed "one of the worst moral and political scandals which had ever besmirched the fair name of Canada."

Mr. Campbell said he would support the Conservative amendment. EXCHANGE WITH LEADER
Robert Forke, Progressive leader, interrupted to tell Mr. Campbell to speak for himself and not for the Progressive group.

Mr. Campbell retorted that Mr. Forke had never been able to speak for the Progressive group and was not speaking for it to-day. Mr. Campbell added that the only purpose of the Woodworth sub-amendment was to "whitewash the whole filthy proceedings."

Mr. Campbell asked what Labor men would think of an attempt to dismiss poor civil servants and "apply the whitewash brush to the real criminals."

CLEARNESS URGED

This brought Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Customs, to his feet with a demand for "real criminals higher up." Mr. Campbell meant the Minister of Customs.

A sharp altercation between the two men followed. Dunning tried to speak, but his voice was drowned by Conservative shouts.

Speaker Lemieux secured order at length. Mr. Campbell then said Mr. Dunning was trying to read into his remarks a reference to the Minister of Customs which was not there.

CLEMENCY ASKED

Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Railways, told the House that within the last two months M. N. Campbell, Progressive, Mackenzie, Sask., had appealed to the Minister of Customs for clemency on behalf of a home brew offender.

Mr. Campbell attempted to clear up the matter when, rising to a question of privilege a little later, he said the granting of his request by the Minister of Justice showed there was nothing wrong with it.

SURPRISES PROMISED IN SEATTLE CASE

Sheriff Says Witnesses Ready For Inquest on Sylvia Gaines Murder

Park Employee Declared to Have Seen Auto Near Scene of Crime

Seattle, June 25.—As an inquest ordered by the coroner and opposed by Sheriff Starwich, county official, and Detective Chief Tennant of the city, began to-day to investigate the slaying of Sylvia Howard Gaines here, Starwich said: "There will be a bombshell exploded in the case. New evidence is being uncovered by my men. I expect to cause some excitement early in the inquest."

The jurors, who were impanelled Tuesday and viewed the body of Miss Gaines, twenty-two-year-old graduate of Smith College, went, as the first move, to view the shore of Green Lake, five miles from the centre of the city, where she was beaten with a stone, mistreated and choked to death.

Coroner Corson instructed the jurors in their duty, and Chief Deputy Coroner Jones led them to the lake. When a juror asked, "Where is the rock?" Corson replied that the department had it.

AUTO WAS SEEN

Starwich said witnesses he expected to produce, and hitherto named, included John Ritz, a park employee who on the night of June 16, when Miss Gaines met her death after an evening walk, saw an automobile driving rapidly through a roll in the park, not public. This road was described as a short cut from the home of Wallace Cloyes Gaines, father of Miss Gaines, to the lake.

Other witnesses, he said, were a man, and a woman who were in an automobile near the lake that night.

COMPANY WINNS SUIT ON BOARDS OF LOGS

Western Construction Co. Given Judgment Following Hearing in Vancouver

Vancouver, June 25.—Concluding a two-day trial in the Supreme Court here, Mr. Justice W. A. Macdonald awarded the Western Construction Company Limited of Victoria judgment against the White Rock Log Company Limited of White Rock on a claim based on the sale by the defendant of two booms of logs.

The plaintiff contended it had employed the defendant to tow the logs from Crofton to Vancouver; that the White Rock Log Company had sold two booms and the Western Construction Company thereby had suffered damage of $5,191.

In its defence, the White Rock Log Company set off $2,327, a debt due by the plaintiff to the James Logging Company and assigned by the latter to the defendant.

The towing company alleged the plaintiff had authorized it to sell the logs in question to the James Logging Company, and the defendant pleaded that the Western Construction Company had been paid out of moneys owing by it to the purchaser of the booms. The defendant paid $333 into court with its defence.

Justice Macdonald allowed the plaintiff damages for conversion of the logs and for breach of contract, and after setting off the defendant's claim, $2,327, the Western Construction Company is to recover approximately $1,000.

T. J. GOODLAKE TAKES SEAT ON OAK BAY COUNCIL

Victoria Bar Association Lodges Protest Regarding Employment of Counsel

T. J. Goodlake, newly-elected councillor for Oak Bay, took his seat on the Oak Bay Council last night and was formally welcomed by Reeve H. S. Anson and the members of the municipal body.

A communication was read from Sydney Child, secretary of the Victoria Bar Association, protesting against the action of Oak Bay and Victoria in employing Vancouver counsel to represent their respective sides of the dispute arising between the two municipalities over the question of water costs. The letter stated that the bar association was of the opinion that just as prominent counsel could be found in Victoria.

The council decided to write the Victoria Association explaining the reasons for its action.

A request was received from the Shalbourne Street High School for the use of the Oak Bay municipal park on Saturday, July 10, for the purpose of holding a picnic. At the request of two taxpayers, the council decided to repair Cadboro Bay Road in front of the Old Men's Home and also to provide proper access to a newly-erected residence located on Dewdney Avenue, The Uplands.

The council also decided to grant $25 to the Victoria Great War Veterans Association to help pay for the cost of entertaining visiting members when the G.W.V.A. convention is held in Victoria this month.

PROGRESS IN CANCER STUDY TOLD DOCTORS

Dr. James Miller Asserts Much Knowledge of Cancer Being Gained

"Cancer is the great problem facing the medical profession at the present time," declared Dr. James Miller of Kingston this morning at the Empress Hotel, when addressing the Medical convention on "The Present Position of the Cancer Problem."

Dr. Miller pointed out, that the deaths from cancer are increasing steadily, Ontario statistics showing a yearly increase in fatalities of 3.1 per cent. "Yet in the last twenty years cancer has been submitted to a steady and persistent scrutiny."

He declared to be incorrect statements that "we do not know anything about cancer." On the contrary, much data has been accumulated, he considered.

Cancer is a lawless cell, which differs in no way from the ordinary flesh, nothing peculiar save its lawless, aimless, irresistible growth, he said. The first demonstration of the inoperability of cancer has been made with mice, but were strictly limited, inoculation being only possible when confined to the species of animal from which the disease has been taken.

Human tissues refuse to take infection from animal sources, he showed. The

PREMIER KING AND MEIGHEN SHARE IN CUSTOMS DEBATE, AS VOTE ON REPORT DRAWS NEAR

Ottawa, June 25.—With the customs inquiry report moving on toward a division expected to be the last important vote of this session, the debate in the House yesterday afternoon and last night brought contributions from Premier King and Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader. Hon. Lucien Cannon, Solicitor-General, and A. W. Neill, Independent, Comox-Alberni, also spoke briefly.

The public galleries were crowded, interest in the discussion increasing as the vote came nearer.

REPORT APPROVED

In beginning speech Premier King said the Government was in entire accord with the findings of the Commons committee. The Government was prepared to accept the report as it had come from the committee, believing it embodied what the committee considered the most necessary steps for the suppression of smuggling.

On the question of the Minister's power of remission of penalties, the Premier reminded the House that the Minister of Customs in the former Conservative Cabinet (Hon.

J. B. M. Baxter) had defended the right and had said such power of remission was not likely to be misused by a minister. Mr. Baxter had claimed the right to use his discretion as regards reduction of remission of penalties.

LETTERS QUOTED

Hon. H. H. Stevens, said Mr. King, had tried to show the Government had full knowledge of irregularities in the administration of the Customs Department, but had taken no action. As a matter of fact the Government had co-operated in every way. It had brought in amendments to the Customs Act to remedy this state of affairs. He quoted letters from the Commercial Protective Association which said the Government had welcomed its suggestions.

How could the Government be held responsible for a system which had existed since Confederation? asked Mr. King. How could it be blamed for the fact that the preventive service was handicapped by laws and regulations enacted from time to time? It was these laws and regulations the Government was trying to change.

REGULATIONS CHANGED

Premier King said the correspondence disclosed the Government had endeavored to meet the requests of Mr. Sparks and the Commercial Protective Association. Drastic regulations had been introduced by the Government following representations from the association.

Mr. King read an unsolicited appreciation of the Government's work in passing the amendments to the Customs Act to restrict smuggling, from the Toronto Board of Trade. The letter was signed by S. B. Gundy, president, and dated July 13, 1925.

BISAILLON CASE

The Prime Minister defended his position in regard to J. E. A. Bisaillon. Mr. Sparks had urged the dismissal of that officer, but it was a departmental matter and Premier King had assured Mr. Sparks that if charges were made an investigation would follow.

Every man of importance in the civil service made enemies, said Mr. King. People came to him daily demanding that certain officials be dismissed, but it was hardly the business of the Prime Minister to tell one of his ministers that a man in his department must be dismissed before the charges were even investigated. That was the position of the Government respecting Bisaillon.

When Inspector Walter Duncan was appointed, he had been hampered somewhat by the restrictions of the department, which made preventive officers report to the department before making arrests. Mr. King had told Inspector Duncan: "We will stand behind you and take the consequences for any arrests you may make."

COMMISSION PLAN

"I went further," said Mr. King. "I told Mr. Sparks time and time again, 'Give me a chance to start an inquiry against Bisaillon and I will appoint a royal commission to go into the whole matter so that anybody can appear and bring forward charges.'"

Mr. King said he also had told Mr. Sparks that if that gentleman was reluctant to make a charge he could let the solicitor general, Mr. J. L. A. Gibbs and Archdeacon H. A. Collinson, make a charge.

A novelty in the form of a high score golf board, kindly loaned by Mrs. G. T. Corfield, proved a very attractive idea. Mr. John Fox was in charge. The winners were Miss Sheila Fildes and Estemene Hope.

A most delicious fruit cake was made and donated by Mrs. A. J. M. Inverarity, for people to guess the weight of Mrs. G. Tiedall, Mrs. E. W. Carr-Hilton and Miss M. E. Edgson tied in this. Miss Edgson kindly waived her claim; the two former ladies thus becoming the lucky possessors of half each.

Mrs. George Macneal was the fortunate winner of the lovely picture, painted and donated by Mrs. Kayll, the number nearest correct guess to the number of peas in the can.

Mr. Dopping-Hopewell's conjuring entertainment was well patronized, and many visited Madam Mystica (Mrs. D. V. Porteous) to hear about their children's races managed by E. W. Carr-Hilton, the various winners were May Lundie, Margaret Peterson and Stow Lundie, first; Esther Thomson; Kathleen Anne Green; Tony Lundie and Don Tull, second.

Archdeacon Collinson proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Carr-Hilton.

Migration Problems Debated in London

London, June 25.—Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, was one of the principal speakers at yesterday's session of the World Labor Migration Congress. He declared Europeans had come to Canada in the past, had worked long hours and had then returned to their homes to spend the earnings. The Canadian trade unions were opposed to that kind of exploitation.

Mr. Moore urged restriction of the present unregulated influx of immigrants.

Dr. E. J. E. of Australia's prominent labor men, declared a great deal of unemployment in Australia was due largely to unrestricted immigration. Australian labor, he said, was especially opposed to the present invasion by southern Europeans, especially Italians, who worked for small wages and retained ideals opposed to the best interests of labor.

Assault Leads to Search For Man

Seattle, June 25.—Federal narcotic agents here are searching for a man who Mrs. Frances Nelson a government witness against Thomas J. Casey, a Seattle lawyer, who two weeks ago was convicted of smuggling narcotics into King County jail, declared entered her home yesterday and beat her.

"You dirty stool pigeon, you'd better get out of town," she said the attacker threatened.

Harry V. Williamson, narcotic agent, said men from his office had guarded Mrs. Nelson's home after the trial, but relaxed their vigilance yesterday.

PRAISE FOR THE TREATY

WHEN HE ARRIVED AT THIS PORT on board the Aorangi from the Antipodes yesterday Mr. H. O. Bell-Irving, a pioneer in the canyery business in British Columbia, had this to say about the desirability of more active trade relations between Canada and Australasia:

It is most desirable that Canada, Australia, and New Zealand be as closely united as possible and, at our end, should do all that lies in our power to cultivate intimate relations.

Every Canadian who has taken the time and trouble to study the provisions of the trade treaty which went into effect last October will realize that the Dominion Government did an excellent stroke of business for this country when it paved the way for that closer commercial unity of which Mr. Bell-Irving speaks. The agreement already has had an extremely beneficial effect upon industry in this Province and there is every indication that before the pact is a year old these benefits will have been considerably enlarged. Of tremendous importance to British Columbia is the wider market which the arrangement furnishes for our newsprint. The effect in this respect has been marked and it is safe to say that as soon as productive capacity has been enlarged by extensions to existing plants, and the establishment of new ones, this part of the Dominion's business with Australasia will run into many millions of dollars annually.

Mr. Bell-Irving naturally speaks with authority. He is one of the Province's best known businessmen and he would study the effect of the operation of the trade treaty, the necessity for doing everything to extract the full benefits from it, from the standpoint of economics alone. He says quite frankly that the arrangement "is something that should be cultivated and kept, for it will mean much for both these great Dominions." To support him in this contention is the experience of the treaty between us and New Zealand, which, he points out, "has been a boon to manufacturers of both countries."

We agree with Mr. Bell-Irving when he says that both these trade treaties are worth keeping, and that "we should take care lest we endanger them." This word of warning from one who has studied their operation at first hand might well be taken by those who look at such arrangements through political eyes alone.

BE CAREFUL

HOT DAYS AND HOT NIGHTS during the last week have dried up all vegetation in the timbered areas and the smallest spark is all that is necessary to turn valuable trees into blackened hulks. There is nothing new about this condition; but the warning to the careless seems to be as necessary as ever. Already reports of avoidable fires have reached the forest branch at the Parliament Buildings and unless there is a considerable amount of moisture forthcoming within the next day or so the hazard will be considerably increased. This calls for earnest thought by everybody who uses the forests or goes anywhere near them. It should also remind the motorist that to throw away a lighted cigar or cigarette end on the highway is a dangerous proceeding at this season. The fact that it may drop on a concrete highway is no guarantee that a breeze will not carry a spark on to tinder-like undergrowth and start a fire. If everybody would exercise the same care out of doors as they do in their own homes, the dry season would cause forestry officials little worry.

THE VICTORIOUS BOBBY

VERY LITTLE IS LEFT IN THE GOLF world for Bobby Jones to conquer. He has captured amateur and open crowns in his native land and to-day he has added the British open to his long list of victories. In major events he has nothing outside the amateur title of Britain to look forward to. And had he caught his stride earlier on his present visit to the Old Country it is quite likely that he instead of his fellow-countryman Sweetser would now have been wearing the laurels of this classic.

These continuous victories by American contenders must be extremely disappointing to British golfers. At the same time both players and critics have repeatedly argued that the brilliant young amateur from Atlanta is good enough for any other player in the world. They have seen him probably at his best on this occasion and they have seen him leave all the hardened professionals behind in the more exacting medal play. In the preliminaries at Sunningdale the other day he set a qualifying mark which is not likely to be beaten on that course for many a long day. His consistency in the tournament proper, moreover, indicates the master in both physical and mental perfection. He earned his victory. He is a real amateur and he will find his hosts genuine in their congratulatory

OUR CREDIT HIGH

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S CREDIT HAS been high for some time now; but it still seems to be soaring if the excellent price which Dr. MacLean received for the latest issue of bonds means anything at all. Thirty-two banks and financial houses competed for the business and the figure obtained was 95.85 for $6,000,000 worth of thirty-year serials. This gives the Province its money on a 4.79 basis and represents the best average price obtained for any Provincial Government securities this year.

Financial experts no longer have any qualms about the financing methods followed by this Province. Only a few years ago the money market had lost interest in British Columbia securities. Our bonds were called "deficit bonds" and the general advice given to us was to borrow no more until our affairs were in a better shape. That day has long since gone and our securities nowadays always are eagerly sought after and good prices offered.

BULB CULTURE

MANY EXPERTS HAVE DECLARED that the climate and soil of the lower end of Vancouver Island are admirably suited for the production of many kinds of bulbs at present grown in Holland and sold to Victorians. Enterprising people in the neighboring states of the republic are going in for the business extensively and this is what The Seattle Times says editorially about the industry:

There are few portions of the country so well adapted to bulb culture, in climate and soil, as Western Washington. This fact has induced one of the oldest bulb-growing concerns of Holland to transfer its plant to this district, located near Lynden. There are now a large bulb plant at Olympia, the new one at Lynden and several important bulb centres on Puget Sound, all developing a growing trade. Producers find this district the most desirable field for intensive cultivation and marketing operations. It is even now one of the most promising sidelines of industrial growth, assuming greater importance annually.

There are surely numerous activities which could be undertaken in this community with the prospect of excellent return. Already Vancouver Island sweet pea seeds have made a great reputation for themselves in Great Britain and other parts of the world. This is only one instance of the manner in which intensive culture in many forms can be made to pay handsome profits. What Washington can do in the matter of bulbs, moreover, Vancouver Island ought to be able to do.

SUZANNE PREPARED

WHEN Mlle SUZANNE LENGLEN arrived at Wimbledon she carried a doctor's certificate declaring that she was suffering from rheumatism, and therefore should not play at all. Hence she was prepared for all contingencies. It is true Suzanne seldom is on the losing side in any circumstances, but one never knows. Some tennis phenomenon hitherto unknown to her might turn up in the tournament and heartlessly snatch the crown from her head. Helen Wills is recovering from an operation for appendicitis and apparently is out of the game for the season, but a miracle might happen in her case, and Suzanne does not like Helen. Besides, those English and Americans might cook up something. The presence of the Queen among the spectators on Wednesday was suspicious. So Suzanne had her list of alibis in good marching order, with the doctor's certificate at the head.

Rheumatism ought to explain a lot. One can not be expected to do much with such an affliction. Hay fever is not so bad, but it is not as convincing as a stiff neck. Toothache, earache and headache were all used up for the tournaments in France, particularly in the match with Helen Wills. Suzanne won that contest in good style, but she says Helen would not have scored at all if she (Suzanne) had not suffered all the night before the game from a severe headache. Nerve attacks will come in handily enough at a pinch, but they have become too commonplace for general use.

We often have thought that Suzanne was somewhat lacking in imagination in the preparation and arrangement of her excuses. She should object to the appearance of the spectators, to their clothes, the way they stand or sit. She should protest against any applause being given to her adversaries. Indeed, there are many things Suzanne should have done, but has neglected to do. Perhaps the most important of these is the development of the true spirit of sportsmanship. A great athlete who is a poor sport presents a much more objectionable picture than a poor athlete who is a good sport.

LORD OXFORD'S LEADERSHIP

From The Ottawa Citizen
Lord Oxford may feel that the Liberal party in Britain would be better without Lloyd George, but it cannot be maintained that Liberalism has thrived under Lord Oxford's leadership. In the last general election, while still plain Mr. Asquith, the Liberal leader encouraged the electorate to vote Conservative, in preference to voting Labor, in constituencies where no Liberal candidate had been nominated. Mr. Asquith lost his own seat to Labor, but the victorious Conservative party elevated him to the peerage. In Hammersmith by-election last week, Labor captured a Tory seat, with the voting as follows:

J. P. Gardner (Labor) 12,095
Samuel Gluckstein (Conservative) 9,484
G. P. Morris (Liberal) 1,974
It will call for something more radical than Lord Oxford and Asquith would ever tolerate to revive the Liberal party. Liberalism is still a great factor in British politics, but Ramsay MacDonald has apparently captured "most of it" for the Labor party.

UNFIT MAMAS

"A child born of a woman who has been to college should be taken from the mother as soon as weaned and placed in some institution where it would be properly cared for." This statement in an irate letter from a wealthy New York manufacturer to an Eastern girls' college has excited the country. But who wants to argue?

GARDEN NOTES

A few little don'ts from "Garden Making and Keeping" by Hugh Findlay, professor of agriculture at Columbia University, may intrigue the busy lawnmowing gentleman. "Do not mow the lawn when it is dry. Do not cut the grass too close during the dry periods. Do not water the lawn too often, but when you do, saturate the soil. Much damage is done by sprinkling the surface soil especially when the sun is high. Water in the late afternoon or evening. Grass may be cut shorter during the early Spring than in Mid-summer or early Fall. Do not cut a new lawn too closely. When the grass is about three inches high, set the lawnmower blades high, and cut just before a rain."

Get Enough Sleep In Summer Time

Summer clothing should be light in weight and color and porous in texture. Such clothing permits evaporation and allows air to reach the skin readily. Frequent changes of clothing, particularly of that next the skin, are especially conducive to comfort.

The keeping of late or irregular hours during the summer is particularly undesirable. An adequate amount of sleep is necessary for health.

Because of the intense heat, it is sometimes difficult to obtain the requisite amount of sleep. At such times an electric fan may aid in inducing sleep.

The air currents produced by a fan should not be directed upon the body.

Regular and sufficient time should be allotted for sleeping purposes and earnest efforts made to get the needed rest.

Exercise suited to the season, as well as the requirements of the individual, should be sought. Constant automobile riding is strongly to be deprecated.

Indulged in moderately, walking, swimming, dancing, golf, tennis, horseback riding, quoits and similar diversions will provide needed exercise during hot weather. Participation in these sports may well be confined to the early morning and late afternoon when the heat of the sun is less intense.

CITY MANAGER

To the Editor:—I shall be obliged if you can please find space for an example of the objective aimed at by the advocates of the city manager plan, in the following presentation of the case for the plan, on the back of every tax notice sent out by the City of Brandon, Manitoba:

"Another year has gone by and it is again our privilege to communicate with you through the medium of your tax bill, and to tell you that it has once more been a financial success from every point of view; the objective set having been reached and the municipality having been able to make a further substantial reduction in its obligation to its bankers."

"For the first time in more than two decades the municipality has under the present city manager form of government, succeeded in reducing its tax rate, its assessment and its past indebtedness each year for two successive years, without sacrificing efficiency or any of its normal functions and with an assessment still further reduced has this year made another reduction of one per cent in the tax rate despite the increase of $10,000 in the cost of education. "Under city manager government over $50,000 of prior year deficits have been paid off in two years and the cost of civic administration reduced by $64,000 in addition to the amount paid off, and this reduction appears to you for a further strenuous effort to assist us in meeting the demands placed upon us."

"The taxes paid in 1925 represented $2.05 in cent of the amount of the levy and the City Council is so optimistic over the results of the past two years that they have this year estimated the collection at the high objective of 92 per cent; so while expressing our sincere appreciation of your past loyalty and co-operation, we are sure that you will appear to you for a further strenuous effort to assist us in meeting the demands placed upon us."

MINIMUM WAGE ACT

To the Editor:—Kindly give me a little space in your paper for this letter. Some six months ago, a resolution was sent to the Parliament Buildings, from the Trades Hall, in regard to the Minimum Wage Act. As I understand, a committee was appointed to investigate upon the wages paid in British Columbia. This committee traveled all over British Columbia and had several interviews with prominent business men. They returned to Victoria, and announced their decision would be made at the end of that week. It was some two months ago. Since that time not a word has been mentioned about it. Does anyone know what has become of it, if so, I would like to know. I am only one of hundreds who are anxiously waiting for it, to come into force.

In the first place it was announced, that it would be in the early Spring, "but they could not mean the early Spring of 1926, as it is past midsummer now," and nothing heard about it yet.

The wages paid by some of the leading industries in Victoria, at the present time, are just an existence. One cannot live as they would do, and keep a wife and family, and it is about time that something be done. Where is this investigating committee? What are they doing? Why all the delay? Does it take them two months to make a decision, as it is all that time since they returned and announced they would give it? It seems very funny to me that they have been so long about it. Not only to me, but hundreds of others who are suffering the same as myself, on the wages paid, at the present time. I wonder if the employers of labor sent a request to the Parliament Buildings that they would give me a little space in your paper for this letter.

Yours truly,
J. H. DEAN.

RE FEDERAL CUSTOMS INQUIRY

To the Editor:—The revelations made of the corruption that existed in the Canadian customs service must bring a blush of shame on the faces of all who are interested more in the development of the Dominion of Canada than they are in the fortunes of any political party.

It has been brought to light that men appointed to the customs service, not on their personal ability, but on their ability to serve the machine politicians in the right way, have broken the oath that they took when they entered the service and have done everything that they should not have done and nothing that they should have done.

It has been revealed that both the Conservative and the Liberal parties are equally to blame for the degrading state of affairs that now exist at Ottawa.

The different gentlemen who have held office as the Minister of Customs should not be too severely blamed for the conditions that exist. It has been pointed out that time after time they have been turned to extend leniency to offenders against the customs laws of the country, and in an effort to serve their own particular political party or friend they have acceded to these requests as a matter of form.

The rank and file who constitute the majority of the parties have only themselves to blame for the conditions that have now been exposed.

As long as they are content to permit the "machines," who are only a minority of the party, to control matters, then just so long will it be before you again return to clean and honest government in the Dominion. For months and months we have seen long debates in the House at Ottawa that got nowhere. For months and months we have seen a fight between the different political parties as to who should hold power. A fight carried on more with a view to benefiting political parties than to build up the Dominion of Canada.

Surely we have in Canada to-day men who are big enough to forget party for a while and get together shoulder to shoulder with a view to building up not only the population, but the industries of the Dominion. Things cannot continue much longer as they are. The time is fast approaching when the people will rise and scrap the party system, if they do not mend their ways.

The people are thinking and it is up to the leaders of political thought to lead the way before it is too late.

LITERARY NOTES

One of the latest books to be put on the "Index Expurgatorius," the list of books the reading of which by Roman Catholics is forbidden by the church, is "The Martyrdom of St. Sebastian," by Gabriel D'Annunzio. Very strong criticism of this work is to be found in "The Readers' Review," a monthly publication edited by a certain Abbe who lives in Paris. This ecclesiastical critic justifies the proscription of D'Annunzio's work on the ground that the famous Italian poet and novelist was a debauched and repugnant personage, a brutal and shameless realist.

Among more recent French writers the Abbe scores Anatole France as being "the worst and most pernicious writer of his time." Many papers are devoted to descriptive notes of the large number of French authors who are under the ban. Victor Hugo is described as "a purveyor of dangerous writings and of living notions, blasphemies and calumnies." Other illustrious names on the Abbe's black list are, to mention only a few of them, M. de Montesquieu, Dumas, father and son, Balzac, George Sand, Stendhal, Zola, de Vigny, Flammariion, Rostand, About and Barbours.

Another interesting confirmation of the Old Testament story of the Hebrew children walking through a fiery furnace is from Dr. W. M. McGovern, famous world traveler and author of "To Lhasa in Disguise." He testifies that he was present at an annual ceremony held by a Shinto sect in Japan and asserts that after elaborate ceremonies not only did the priest walk across a large flaming bed of coals, but spectators did the same. He says, "I personally walked across three times, and although my clothes were slightly scorched, my flesh was in no way injured, although I walked with my bare feet. How this can be accounted for I do not know, although the fact that before treading on the red-hot coals my feet were rubbed in salt may have had something to do with it."

Yesterday was the fiftieth anniversary of the Custer massacre. We to-day can scarcely realize the terrific shock and grief suffered by the American people when they heard that 5,000 Indians, under the leadership of Crazy Horse and Sitting Bull, had defeated in battle and massacred Custer and five troops of the Seventh Regiment. In "The Story of the Little Big Horn," by Col. W. A. Graham, this battle is described as "The greatest victory ever won by the Indian warrior over the white soldier—in all history there is no such record of savage triumph over trained troops." Custer's defeat is thus described: "The great war chief Gall of Assailed in the rear by Ogallalas under Crazy Horse and Two Moons, the Cheyennes, enveloped by overwhelming numbers on every side, swept with fire in every direction. The gallant Custer and his comrades fled. Of the 225 men who rode with Custer into the fight that day, not one was left alive. They were utterly exterminated. Not one escaped the fury of the Sioux."

COMPANY DENIES RESPONSIBILITY FOR FIRE DAMAGE

Justified in Carrying on Operations Counsel Says in Appeal

Logging Companies a Protection
For Forests, Says
W. D. de B. Farris

The humidity reading last August, when a fire said to have originated from a spark of a snapping cable damaged the Tye farm, near Courtenay, was at a point where the Comox Logging and Railway Company was justifying its operations, says W. D. de B. Farris, K.C., submitted in his arguments before the Appeal Court this morning.

The fire appeared to have been caused by the company's operations, but the trial judge was of opinion that as a precautionary measure such dry weather, operating conditions should have been suspended until a change took place in the weather, and that by continuing work, not only the company's property, but the surrounding country was endangered.

DAMAGE ASSESSED
It was referred to R. M. Palmer to assess the damage done to the land, the property of the plaintiff, Mrs. Higgins, but under lease or occupancy to the defendant, the Comox Logging and Railway Company. Mr. Palmer found in $11,325.00 damages to Mrs. Higgins and $394 to Chan Sing. For the plaintiffs Frank Higgins, K.C., applied for an order to direct a reference as to damages.

HUMIDITY
On the day the cable, a spark from which is said to have caused the fire, broke the humidity reading at the camp read 47. Mr. C. Cowan of the Provincial Government forestry department as an expert had given evidence that the danger point was when the relative humidity dropped to 40. Humidity was the governing principle and was it reasonable, Mr. Farris asked, that operators should take greater care than men assigned by the Government to special duties? He advised them to take. Humidity had not reached the point to cause them to shut off operations. He admitted the company's previous warning to Chan Sing, a telegram warning them to be careful. It did not advise them to shut down and he submitted every care had been taken.

The telephone was shown to the company had kept in touch with the forestry department. The department having the responsibility of property and the crown was not to direct a reference as to damages.

After pointing to the fire fighting equipment of logging companies, Mr. Farris expressed the opinion the forests of Vancouver Island would suffer more if logging ceased. Men were there and fire fighting apparatus on hand organized to battle a blaze. The island would be denuded of fire fighting apparatus and sixty per cent. of fire hazards would still remain. If the operators were created by campers and carelessness were cited by Mr. Farris.

CRITICIZES METHODS
With a model before him Mr. Higgins claimed an absolute defect in the company's system of handling logs without tree jacks. Under the method used by the company the snapping of cables was inevitable, he said.

Ten thousand dollars for Mrs. Higgins for damage to her property claimed to be ruined as a hunting preserve and $5,000 on account of damages done to Chan Sing, who leased and developed the farm, was originally claimed.

SMUGGLING APPEAL
The case of Barton vs. Kinnon, an appeal arising out of a conviction under the Customs Act, was heard by the Court of Appeal yesterday. The appellant, David Kinnon, was charged with having in his possession goods imported into Canada without duty having been paid thereon, was convicted and sentenced to one year's imprisonment at hard labor.

The goods in question were barber supplies, and were found by the customs authorities in a store or office in Vancouver conducted under the name of the Vancouver Barber Supply Company. The evidence showed that the articles were shipped from Seattle to Point Roberts, from which place they found their way into Vancouver.

Accused was apparently the person in charge of this concern. He did not give evidence before the magistrate, but the point was raised as to whether the accused was the person properly chargeable with the offence, and this was relied upon, with other formal objections to the conviction, before the Court of Appeal.

APPEAL DISMISSED
The court, however, sustained the conviction and dismissed the appeal. R. L. Matland appeared for accused and W. C. Brown, K.C., for the crown.

deprecations of gangsters in their armed protection, they warned. Mayor Pendray addressed the convention briefly, pointing to the appreciation felt by Canadians for the real co-operation always shown by United States officers in the pursuit of offenders who crossed the line. The Beryl G case, which culminated in the capture in New York and New Orleans of men wanted for murder and kidnapping, was cited as a clear example of the efficacy of such co-operation. It was a delight to feel that neighboring forces across the border stood ready to lend their aid at such times, said the Mayor.

Replying in part to the Mayor's address United States delegates stressed their admiration for the administration of justice in Canada; the sureness of the police system; and the swift and equitable rulings of the British courts. While the Mayor had mentioned the splendid work, Provincial Police forces in the West also came in for high praise, after case being cited as evidence of the tenacity and efficacy of the British system.

VICTORIA WELL LIKED
Mayor Pendray was great impressed with the hospitality of the host city, Spokane, and the delightful with the round of entertainment mapped out for the delegates interminably with their more serious labors. Victoria, he found, was surprising well known by residents of the interior city, a great many of whom recalled with pleasure their visits to this city.

Mayor Pendray found further proof of his conviction as to the good work being done by the Victoria and Island Development Bureau through their Spokane agent, Oliver Hollingsworth, whose wide acquaintance kept the city well to the front with noisily makers in the interior points, he said.

While in Spokane Mayor Pendray called on J. L. Potts, Canadian Government agent who maintains an office at First and Post Streets in that city, and whose able work has attracted much of the attention of Canadian farm lands and ranching operations of the Dominion.

Canadian delegates to the convention were received with open arms, reports the Mayor, and the 300 members of the association assembled in a warm tribute to Victoria, the host-city of 1925. Many of the delegates are coming this way to the Beryl G case, and the convention programme is completed.

Of special interest on the speaking programme was the address of Mrs. Bertha Landes, Seattle newswoman, who was given an ovation. After recounting her experiences in the reorganization of the Seattle police system, Mrs. Landes sounded the keynote of the anti-crime convention was delivered by the police.

"I believe in sanity and wisdom in the execution of law. The burden and duty of enforcing the law rests with us, and I am willing to take blame and criticism when we fail, but not willing to take the blame, though, if the citizens do not take part in enforcement by being themselves observers of the law."

Many brilliant addresses were heard at the convention boards on purely police matters. Luke S. May

Chinese Wins Yale Honors

Scientific School Graduates Vote Him "Most Brilliant" of Class

Dana Yung Kwai, strapping Chinese, is this year's most distinguished graduate of Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University.

Typical Oriental reserve finds laconic expression in typical slang as he asks Kwai how he feels about it.

"Bunk!" says he. Of the two hundred or more budding scientists and engineers who will receive graduation credentials from "Sheff," Kwai has been voted by his class mates the most brilliant. This makes him class orator.

Second place was voted him in versatility and likelihood of success in professional life.

Civil engineering is the work to which he will turn, now that he has vaulted all the Sheffield's academic hurdles in perfect form.

Kwai is the son of Yung Kwai, secretary of the Chinese Legation at Washington.

His father and two brothers also are Yale graduates.

Central High School at Washington sent Kwai to "Old Eli."

As a freshman he attained first rank scholarship and won the New York Yale Club prize in history and chemistry.

As a sophomore he acquired general one-year honors for excellence

Dana Yung Kwai

In all studies and won prizes in drawing, engineering, mechanics, mathematics and physics.

As a senior, finally, he captured the class orator sweepstakes—the Sheffield graduate's most coveted award.

Between periods of academic work Kwai found time to make the freshman swimming, university swimming and junior class water polo teams.

Membership in the Sigma Xi national honorary scientific society, Tau Beta Pi fraternity, Aurelian Honor Society, and the Book and Bond society came to him at various stages of his rush to student fame.

But—"Bunk!" says Kwai to anyone who suggests that his performance has been extraordinary.

Man Surrenders On Theft Charge

Seattle, June 25.—Robert Critcher, fifty-four, borrowed five dollars from a friend in Vancouver, B.C., so he could come here to surrender on a charge of embezzlement in Reno. He told the police: "I'm a wanted criminal." He said he had stolen $450 from a safety deposit box in a Reno hotel, where he was employed as a clerk. He explained he "borrowed" the money to bet on horse races. He lost. With $116 unpaid he left for Canada, where, he related, his conscience hurt him and when he reached Seattle he was undecided whether to jump into the bay or give himself up.

THESE WOMEN

The names and situations in this story are fictitious.

She brushed her handkerchief wearily across her eyes.

"Nona, you're so tired!" There was sympathy and self-criticism in Audrey's voice. "Go and lie down in my bed, and sleep a while!"

Nona, unexpectedly began to cry. "I won't do that," she said, trying to wipe her tears away, "but you're a sweet little kid!"

"Why, that's what Mr. Morton calls me!" said Audrey.

Nona took up her wraps, and started away. Audrey halted her. "Wait until I can send for the car," she said. "That poor driver hasn't had much sleep, either, but I want you to ride back to your apartment. You are terribly tired."

In the Morton car, the yawning driver slept at the wheel. Audrey watched them out the window until they were out of sight.

It was well after noon when Morton reappeared.

Freely shaven, in immaculate linen, his crisp, gray hair brushed back, he came running down the steps like a boy.

Audrey was waiting for him in the drawing-room. When he saw her, he stopped, suddenly.

"What in the dickens have you been doing to your face?" he demanded.

Audrey looked at him demurely. Her lips were scarlet, and her cheeks were bright with rouge. Where her full, shapely eyebrows had been, now was only a thin line. Her brows had been plucked.

Morton looked more closely. There was mascara upon her eyelashes.

"What in the name of all that's holy is the big idea?" he wanted to know.

"I just wanted to look pretty," she told him, pursing her lips. "I called up Mr. Parrish, and he is going to take me out this afternoon."

Audrey smiled grimly. "You'll give him the shock of his life," he said. "What did you gum up your face like that for?"

"Don't I look nice?"

"Of course you do," he said, "but you don't look as nice as you did before. You don't need any of that stuff on your lips, and cheeks. I wish you would take it off."

She shook her head determinedly. "There has been something wrong with me, and I'm trying to make it right," she said. "You wouldn't leave me to go out with other women like I was at attractive as they are."

"I have seen them, and I see how they look and dress, and I'm going to do just the way they do," she came closer to him and looked up into his face. "I'd dress myself like a Fiji Islander if I could make you stay with me!"

He sat down, troubled. "Hang it," he said, "that isn't the ideal. Men don't like women with war paint on."

"Then why do they go with women who paint that way?" she inquired.

"Because they're amusing, I suppose," he said, "but great heavens! You don't suppose that any man is fooled by cosmetics, do you?"

"I don't know what it is that makes those girls attractive," Audrey said, "but I'm going to keep on trying until I find out. And I'm going to do everything they do, and wear everything they wear, until I do find out."

Morton gave up the discussion, and calling for his coat and hat, went out the door. Audrey stood thinking a moment, and then followed him. She caught the next elevator, and as she reached the street, saw him walking rapidly toward the corner.

Without regard to Parrish, who was due at the apartment, she sped after her guardian, trying to catch up with him. He turned the corner, and stepped into a cigar store. When he came out, she was at the door.

"Daddy, forgive me!" she said. "But I didn't want you to go away. I'm afraid you misunderstood me. I don't want to be a tough woman! I just want you to like me."

He took her arm and turned with her toward home. "Well, you'll go with him," he said. "Then you go out with him. Try your new scheme on him, and see if it works. If you're expert, and do the thing right, you may be able to find out a lot of things about men."

When they reached their building, Parrish was just entering the elevator.

"Hello, Parrish," said Morton. "And good-bye."

He kissed Audrey and hurried up the door. Parrish watched him until he was out of sight. Then he turned to Audrey. Seriously he looked at her rouged cheeks and reddened lips and sighed.

"Shall we walk?" he asked.

Together they turned back to the street again.

"Do you know," said he, as they fell into step. "There has been something I have been wanting to say to you for a long time."

She looked up at him interestedly. "What was it?"

He pondered a moment and then continued. "Do you know, Miss Morton, that I have been wanting to speak to you about something, but I suppose it is none of my business? Something that I think you ought to think about."

Her look was inquiring, but he had difficulty in going ahead.

"You see," he said, "it's like this. We saw Mr. Morton in that cabaret the other night. And we have seen him with that girl he calls Nona. Now here's what I wanted to say to you. I've adopted daughter, and everything like that, but wouldn't it be better for you, as a young girl, if you lived some place else?"

Audrey whirled on him. "What do you mean?" she cried.

"I mean I think he isn't the right man to be your guardian and to live in the same house with you."

He stopped abruptly. Audrey, stepping back a pace, slapped him in the mouth.

He looked at her with a surprised expression. "What do you mean, Mr. Morton with you, have seen Mr. Morton with you,

CHAPTER XXI

Parrish was young and big and strong, but the blow staggered him. He stepped back a pace or two, covered his mouth with both hands, and stared at Audrey aghast.

"Don't you do that again!" he said, his voice muffled by his fingers.

"You unspeakable cad!" she cried. Her slim body was taut, as if she were about to spring on him. He retreated another step. Slow anger was taking the place of astonishment in his eyes.

"If you do that again, I'll shake you!" he told her, his face set.

"Just you try it! Just you try it!" she shrieked.

A sound from the rear caused her to turn. For the first time she saw that a knot of spectators was rapidly gathering. Delighted applause was in their eyes, and words of encouragement arose.

She looked back at Parrish, scornful eyes, and turning her back, almost ran to her own apartment building.

Parrish stood watching her, until she was out of sight. Then, with several of the more enterprising members of the volunteer group following him, he plodded away on foot toward Morton's office.

Audrey stormed into her drawing-room, a small whirlwind of wrath, and tried to reach Morton by telephone. She was told by the clerk in his office that he had not yet come in.

"Too soon," she said to herself, as she hung up the receiver.

She ran up the stairs, and woman-fashion, she released her nerve tension by unpacking and repacking her wardrobe drawers, refusing the assistance of her maid. This done, she changed her dress, and carefully reapplied the rouge and mascara that had been disturbed by little trickles of angry tears.

Her eye fell upon the painting that she and Morton had bought in their stroll around town. It had been unboxed, and stood in its frame on the floor, against the wall of her dressing room. She went over and examined it. It was a portrait of a plump-cheeked girl, in the headdress and garb of two centuries ago. The background and garments were in the gloomy coloring of the older masters, but as Audrey looked more closely, she saw that the paint was not cracked with age.

"He was right—he ALWAYS knows," she said, aloud.

She tilted the picture until she could see the back of it. Heavy yellowed paper was pasted on the frame, covering the rear of the canvas. She inspected the frame itself with a dispassionate glancing off the paper, she bent the little nails that held the canvas in its frame, and pulled the picture from the old gilt molding. She held it up level with her eyes.

Then she gave a sharp exclamation. She was looking at a line of small lettering in the lower right-hand corner of the painting. The letters were in red pigment.

"H. Morton, January, 1901," they read.

She looked again, to make sure. Then, with a choked ejaculation, she ran to her closet, hurriedly donned her coat and hat, and with the picture under her arm, ran down the stairs, into the hall, and without waiting for the elevator hurried by the stairs, reached her apartment.

Dancing with impetuosity, she waited on the curb until a taxicab appeared. Into this she climbed with her picture, and ordered the driver to go as rapidly as possible to Morton's office.

When the taxi pulled up at the building, she leaped out, threw a five-dollar bill to the driver, and without waiting for change, ran up the stairs. Upstairs she brushed aside a clerk who was standing at Morton's door, and rushed into his private office.

He looked up with a smile. Then, he looked at the girl under her arm, he tilted back in his chair, and his eyes half closed.

Shaking with excitement, the girl stood the picture on edge upon his table.

"Morton nodded. 'You have been investigating already,' he said, quietly. 'So you liked my picture?'

"Did you paint it?" she cried. Morton reached over, took the painting, and regarded it thoughtfully. His voice was a little heavy as he answered. "A quarter of a century ago."

He laid the picture down, and turned to stare out the window. Audrey was on her knees beside him, her hands clasping his arm.

"Oh, daddy, I never knew you painted! Where did you paint it? Why didn't you ever tell me you were a painter? Why did you stop painting?"

He patted her head, absently. After a long pause, he said: "I never intended to tell you. But it was an odd little trick of fate, wasn't it, that you should be painting there in the art store? I hadn't seen it for nineteen years."

She shook his arm. "But tell me, daddy—tell me all about it!"

He still looked out the window, his eyes fixed and apparently unseeing. "I was an artist once—a kind of an artist," he said. "But I had hoped to keep all that buried in the past—buried in the dark, dark past!"

Audrey put her hand on his cheek, and turned his face toward her. "If you saw that picture the last time nineteen years ago, that must have been about the time you adopted me! Did I see it when I was a baby?"

He arose hastily, and went to the window. His face was close to the glass, so she could not see his expression. She saw his body give a little convulsive shake. When at last he turned around, his face was composed.

"Yes, sweetheart, you saw that when you were a baby—though I don't if you knew what it was."

"But why didn't you tell me all about it—why didn't you tell me you were an artist?"

He shook his head, and going to her, where she still sat upon her knees, he placed his hands on her shoulders.

"Child," he said gently, "it was for the same reason that I have not told you many other things—who your mother and father were; what your name was before I adopted you; who I was and where I came from; I have always wanted to keep shut the door of the past. Help me to do it. Won't you, little one? It is full of pain."

Audrey sank farther to the floor, with her head bowed.

"Aren't you ever going to tell me who I am?" she asked.

"Morton considered. 'Some day, maybe—though you will be happier, and so will I, if I never do tell. But not now, dear.'"

PYTHIA BROTHER GIVEN HIGH HONOR

Brother John Evans, Past Grand Chancellor, Honored at Ceremony

Duncan, June 25.—In the presence of a large gathering of Knights of Pythias from all over Vancouver Island and the lower Mainland, the presentation of a fifty-year jewel, together with a large illuminated address containing all the seals of the lodges of British Columbia and also the seal of the Grand Lodge of British Columbia was presented to Past Grand Chancellor John N. Evans of Duncan, B.C., on Thursday evening. In the absence of the Grand Chancellor Bro. James Fairclough of Merritt, B.C., who was unavoidably away, owing to an accident, the honor of making the presentation was assigned to Bro. E. S. H. Winn, P.G.C., and supreme representative.

P.G.C. Bro. Winn introduced the subject on hand by giving a splendid address on the "Fraternal Principles of the Order," and gradually led up to the main subject under issue. He expressed the best wishes of the members of the order in British Columbia, voicing the sentiments of 5,000 members. Bro. Evans is the first Knight in British Columbia to receive this honor, and as far as facts are known at present is the first Knight in the whole of Canada. The authorized records show that in the whole supreme domain of Canada and the United States of America, also including other outside lodges such as Alaska, Canal Zone, Philippines, Honolulu, etc., that there are not more than possibly ten to fifteen Knights who can boast of fifty years' continuous record in the organization. Bro. Evans was completely taken by surprise, as every effort had been taken to keep the presentation a secret. He made a very nice reply, thanking the Knights for the presentation, and then spoke on things of general interest to the order.

Among those present were: Deputy G.C. Geo. W. Allison, Past Grand Chancellor J. M. Hughes, Chancellor Commander Geo. A. Turner, Past Chancellors D. H. Gregson and W. A. Shaw, Past G.M. of Ex. A. G. H. Harding, officers of Far West-Victoria Lodge No. 1, Bros. C. E. Price, Loren L. Guphill.

CARPENTER STRIKE TO BE CALLED OFF HERE THIS EVENING

Employers Shun Morning Conference, But Turn in Tide Comes in Afternoon

Negotiations for a settlement of the carpenters' strike were resumed this afternoon, which it was announced, would in all probability bring a settlement before evening with the men returning to work to-morrow or Monday morning.

The attempt made this morning by J. D. McNeven, deputy minister of labor, to bring about a settlement of the carpenters' strike in Victoria and district, did not result in any decision of the points at issue. Mr. McNeven had invited the master builders and the members of the strike committee to a meeting at the Parliament Buildings at 10.30 o'clock. Shortly after that hour the men's representatives filed into the Maple Room, but the only one present from the employers' side was William Luney, president of the Builders' Exchange, who explained that he had accepted the invitation only in an unofficial capacity.

Mr. McNeven expressed his regret that the employers as a body had not sent a representative, but he believed there was a general desire, not only on the part of many of those participating in the dispute, but also on the part of the general public, to see the strike brought to an end. It had now lasted for nearly a month, and he thought the time had arrived when a settlement should be made. A suggestion by Mr. Luney was that the men should agree to go back to work for those employers who would be willing to consider their terms, without holding out for a general agreement. This did not receive assent, but from the men's side a tentative inquiry was made as to whether the employers would agree to a wage scale of $4.50 a day until August 1, $6.75 a day for the month of August, and $7 a day from September 1. It was explained that this was not a present offer, but an offer of those terms were made it might receive favorable consideration.

In the absence of the men's representatives, the men's strikers decided that their best plan would be to report the situation to their members.

LADYSMITH SMELTER OPENING HAILED AS BOON TO B.C. MINES

The town of Stewart, B.C., is now practically deserted as mine development work is now at its peak and almost every available man in the north is in the hills, S. P. Fitzgerald and John M. Morrison, mining operators, who are in Victoria to-day said.

Mr. Fitzgerald, who recently turned over the independence mine to Charles G. Bush and a banking group of Detroit and Vancouver, who are in Victoria to-day said.

Mr. Morrison said that the syndicate, surveys of the tunnels completed last week by Dalby McKell, Victoria and Stewart surveyors, estimate of the mill will follow that of the Dunwell.

Mr. Morrison is here to meet Herbert Carmichael and H. B. Thomson, who are opening up the Ladysmith smelter, to complete arrangements for shipping the ore there from the foreign smelters. Mr. Morrison said that the plant was being built to do a great business with the northern mines.

The opening of the Ladysmith smelter with its new process of treating ores, is the best news we have had," Mr. Morrison went on. "The new process separates lead and zinc ores, which has not been possible in present smelting operations. With this new process, instead of receiving pay for all contents, instead of

SCARLET FEVER CONQUERED BY VACCINATION

Brilliant Results Follow When Anti-toxin Serum Used

Fever Subsides and Complications Lessened by New Treatment

Scarlet fever was discussed at the Medical convention this morning by Dr. J. G. Fitzgerald of Toronto and Dr. H. B. Cushing of Montreal, the former dealing with diagnosis, prevention and treatment of scarlet fever, while Dr. Cushing discussed anti-toxin developments.

With the aid of thirty volunteers, experimenters in the past few years have gained much valuable information as to scarlet fever. A simple skin test, known as the "Dick Test," had been developed which enabled differentiation to be made between immune and other persons, and further work has been done to develop from this skin test an anti-toxin, with considerable success.

"What must we do to prevent children from taking scarlet fever? We now can eliminate the immune by the Dick test, and it is now possible to convert a Dick positive into a Dick negative, if it is vaccinated before it is eight years of age, without the child suffering any inconvenience. How long the vaccination is effective we do not yet know, but suggest a Dick test will show if the immunity attained by the vaccination is still existent, said Dr. Fitzgerald.

Vaccination by scarlet fever anti-toxin will certainly protect for from ten days to four weeks, and where the fever has broken out in a home use of the anti-toxin will stop further spread of the infection in the family. Scarlet fever outbreaks in hospitals, previously a common occurrence in the nursing staffs, have been completely controlled, in one hospital only one case developed, that being a nurse who by some oversight had not been given anti-toxin treatment or subjected to the Dick test. "This is certainly a wonderful achievement," Dr. Fitzgerald said amid an outbreak of applause.

ANTI-TOXIN EFFECTS

Dr. Cushing of Montreal said that an abundant supply of scarlet fever anti-toxin serum is now available to anti-practitioners, and data as to what can or cannot be expected is sufficient for the production of definite conclusions.

Serum prepared under three methods had been used in the past year in Montreal and little difference in effects, other than degree, was observable. Dr. Cushing stated that 500 cases had been treated in Montreal in differing manners.

The first obvious result attained is a prompt reduction in temperature when administered to a patient already suffering from scarlet fever, especially if administered within a few hours of the eruption. "Failure of the temperature to fall is a certain indication of an error in diagnosis," he said.

A second notable change is the rapid disappearance of the typical rash, while the delirium, headaches and other pains promptly disappear. "The patient, when old enough to describe sensations, declares a feeling of wellbeing and wants to get up. The entire aspect of scarlet fever has been changed as a result of using serum. Not even in diphtheria is the result more marked," he said.

LESSENED COMPLICATIONS

Dr. Cushing was cautious in commenting on other aspects of use of serum, such as the complications common to scarlet fever. He would only say that these conditions had definitely been lessened, but considered that the serious danger of the disease was lessened. "The use of the serum has resulted in a marked improvement in the resistance of the patient. It reduces these by at least one-half and makes them less severe," he said.

FEVER DEFEATED

Noting that in recent years scarlet fever has been steadily becoming a milder form, "I have yet to see a case of scarlet fever which has received a dose of anti-toxin, within the first three days and died as a result of the fever," he said.

Use of serum had completely controlled eight Montreal outbreaks by prompt immunization of the contacts. Dr. Cushing said, noting that immunity could not be relied upon for more than two weeks if the exposure continued. "In other words, if a patient is kept in the house, immunity for the other inmates can only be assured by revaccination every two weeks," he said, with objection to lessening the period of quarantine. "Scarlet fever should be added to the ever-lengthening list of diseases which have been definitely conquered by medical science," he said in conclusion, a burst of applause following.

ARTHRITIS AND MASTITIS

Acute arthritis and its variations were discussed by Dr. Alex. Gibson of Winnipeg, giving a study of its causes, experimental tests by laboratory workers and treatment methods.

Dr. A. J. Grant dealt with diseases of the mammary glands, declaring too many women suffer needless operations. This has been in many cases because of the similarity to cancer, but careful study showed that few of the cysts frequently mistaken for cancer when women attain certain ages are dangerous or become cancer, although they may tend in that direction. They are often due to the presence of the ducts of non-lactating breasts, the early stages can be remedied by draining and removal of the plugs, which require no radical treatment. Detailing diagnostic methods, Dr. Grant said: "If the patient has confidence in her physician's ability she will feel better after such an examination, but there are many who will go from doctor to doctor until she finds one willing to remove the breast."

Dr. W. B. Hendry of Toronto spoke on the taximias of pregnancy during the morning session.

Bureau gets a clean slate from that tribunal. I will ask him to give up his seat in the Senate."

The report of the committee should be concluded in and its work should not be allowed to cease "at a time when it suits honorable gentlemen opposite."

MUCH GROUND FOR INQUIRY

Mr. King declared the Conservatives had centred the whole inquiry in Quebec. There were other ports in Canada which had not been investigated. There were distilleries which had not been investigated and every one ought to be, said the Premier.

The amendment moved by Mr. Woodsworth was one Mr. King said he could support.

The Premier paid a very high tribute to the work of Mr. Bolvin. Until a few days ago nobody had dared to point the finger of accusation at the new Minister of Customs, he said. If that gentleman was to be censured, why had not the censure been brought on weeks ago when Mr. Bolvin was before the committee? he asked.

In conclusion the Premier asked members of the House to remember they might be themselves in Mr. Bolvin's position some day and they should judge as they hoped to be judged.

MEIGHEN'S OPINIONS

Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, who followed Mr. King, said the Woodsworth sub-amendment sought to "destroy" the Stevens amendment and to eliminate the censure of the Government and the Minister of Customs.

Mr. Meighen styled the Woodsworth sub-amendment as "froth and foam," mere words, for the purpose of saving the Government. He had no objection to the Woodsworth sub-amendment being added to the Conservative amendment, in order that members might have an opportunity of voting censure on the Government. At the same time Mr. Woodsworth "led his way" with respect to his sub-amendment, such an opportunity would not be afforded.

Mr. Meighen said that if Hon. Jacques Bouché had wished to be called before the committee he could have been called.

READ PARTS OF REPORT

Mr. Meighen read extracts from the customs report. Then he added: "In face of that, the Prime Minister says Jacques Bouché's record is immaculate so far as his department is concerned."

He referred to Premier King's statement that he (Mr. King) was prepared to go before a court if necessary.

"He says he is prepared to go before the court to prove it—when he knows the court is closed," he said.

Mr. Meighen asked how it was that "the assiduous minister with the immaculate reputation, Mr. Bouché, had never known about Bisillon. How was it nothing had been done about Bisillon until after Mr. Stevens had given notice of his resolution?"

The Opposition leader declared R. P. Sparks in a letter to the Prime Minister had offered to make specific charges against Bisillon.

"That letter was never answered," said Mr. Meighen.

TREMBLAY LIQUOR

Mr. Meighen said Mr. Bolvin now claimed the large Tremblay liquor, which was sold to the Dominion Distillers, had been released by them as denatured alcohol for export to the United States. Denatured alcohol was not admitted to the United States under the country's prohibition law, he said.

"I say the Government of Canada should not be a party to a breach of the law of the United States," said Mr. Meighen.

Mr. Bolvin rose to deny absolutely that the Government had known the liquor was exported to the United States.

"Everybody knows the liquor was sold so as to make for a fortune for the friends of the Minister and a fortune was made," declared Mr. Meighen.

MINISTER BLAMED

Mr. Meighen then discussed the Moses Aziz case.

"If the Minister acceded to the appeal of the members for Gloucester, his offence was greater than that of the member," Mr. Meighen said.

"Does the Minister consider he was right to intervene in this case?" Mr. Meighen asked Mr. Bolvin.

"It all depends on the merits of the case," replied the Minister.

"Who tries the merits of the case?" asked Mr. Meighen.

JONES WINS BRITISH OPEN GOLF TITLE

U. S. Amateur's 291 Is Best By Two Strokes

Al Watrous, Former Canadian Open Champion, Second, With 293 After Having Lead by Two Strokes at End of the Third Round; George von Elm and Walter Hagen Tied for Third Place With 295; Abe Mitchell Shot Two Good Rounds To-day But Could Not Overtake Leaders

St. Annes, June 25.—Bobby Jones, American golf champion, to-day added the British open crown to his long list of trophies. He completed the seventy-two holes grind with an aggregate of 291 strokes.

Al Watrous, former Canadian open champion, was second with 293. Walter Hagen, United States pro, tied with George von Elm, Los Angeles, for third place, with 295.

The trophy goes to the United States for the fifth time. It was first captured by a United States golfer in 1921, when Jack Hutchison won it. Walter Hagen was victorious in 1922 and again in 1924, while Jim Barnes won it last year.

Al Watrous slipped into the lead at the end of the third round with a fine 69 for an aggregate of 215. Bobby Jones, United States amateur champion, was two strokes behind, taking 73 for an aggregate of 217.

PERFECT PUTTING TOUCH

The secret of Watrous's performance was deadly accuracy and a perfect putting touch. In the fourth round, however, Watrous fell away and took a 78, which gave him a total of 293.

The veteran, J. H. Taylor, had a sterling 71 in the third round for an aggregate of 224. This was also the aggregate of Bill Mehlhorn, Chicago pro, who had a poor 79 this morning after leading the field with Bobby Jones at the end of yesterday's play. Mehlhorn had his worst round in the afternoon, taking an 80, which left him far in the rear.

Abe Mitchell came through strongly to-day. He had a 72 in the morning and a 71 in the afternoon, the two best rounds by any one player. Mitchell, however, had taken a 78 both yesterday and Wednesday, and finished up with 299.

ARCHIE COMPTON, BRITISH PROFESSIONAL, WHO WAS DISQUALIFIED IN THE THIRD ROUND FOR PLAYING A BALL OUT OF BOUNDS, BUT PLAYED THE TOURNAMENT OUT FOR A "MORAL VICTORY," TOOK 71 THIS AFTERNOON FOR A TOTAL OF 299.

Morgan Beaten by Herman in Boston

Boston, June 25.—Babe Herman of California gained a judges' decision over Ted Morgan, world's junior lightweight boxing champion, in a ten-round bout at the Revere Cycle Track last night. The title was not at stake.

Herman landed rights and lefts to the jaw with telling effect and was never in danger. Morgan employed a left jab for the most part. Both fighters were fresh at the final bell. In the third round Herman dropped Morgan with a right to the jaw, but Ted was up without a count. Morgan did his best fighting in the sixth, eighth and ninth, and in the fifth scored four jabs in succession without a return.

In the ten round semi-final, Johnny Hill of Manila knocked out Martin Kil Silvers of Ansonia, Conn., in the second round.

Senators and Giants Win Double-headers, May Be On Way Up

Drives May Take These Clubs Somewhere; Reds and Pirates Fighting Madly

Boston Stop Yankees and White Sox Consolidate Their Line in Second Place

New York, June 25.—July, the month that furnishes baseball champions, is drawing near with the New York Yankees far in the van in the American League and the Pittsburgh Pirates and Cincinnati Reds fighting tooth and nail for honors in the National.

Washington in the American and New York in the National, two teams selected as favorites before the season started, are down in the second division, but yesterday they started drives which may mean something. The Giants captured a double-header by slugging the offerings of Philadelphia pitchers to every corner of the Polo Grounds. The scores were 12-7 and 7-2.

WASHINGTON TAKES TWO

Washington's double victory was at the expense of the Philadelphia Athletics 8-4 and 3-1, the second game being called in the sixth on account of rain. The Yankees with only six hits, carried the Boston Red Sox eleven innings before admitting defeat 6-5. Chicago gained a game on the Yankees and at the same time secured their hold on second place by beating the Cleveland Indians 3-6.

Suzanne Goes to Courts Without Rheumatism

French Champion, Who Yesterday Had Hay Fever and Last Night a Sore Neck, Resumes Play in Wimbledon Championship, Winning Match Easily; Spectators Thought She Looked Alright, But She Had a Doctor's Certificate With Her

London, June 25.—Suzanne Lenglen announced through Jean Borotra, her fellow-countryman, this morning that she intended to continue in the Wimbledon lawn tennis tournament. Borotra said, however, that she would need two or three days' rest afterward. Friends of Suzanne say that her physician has diagnosed the ailment from which she has been suffering for several days as rheumatism. Bearing the physician's certificate setting forth that she should not "take part in any vigorous match," Miss Suzanne Lenglen arrived at the tennis courts to-day to defend her title as singles champion in the Wimbledon Golden Jubilee tournament.

Miss Joan Fry, youthful English star, of Wilmington, Del., 2-6, 6-4, 6-4, in the women's singles, and Senorita Alvarez, Spain, defeated Miss E. D. Holman, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

Miss Lenglen seemed her usual self as she took the court for her twice postponed singles match with Mrs. Dewhurst. Suzanne sped through the match to victory at 6-2, 6-2.

The Duke of York, King George's second son, suffered defeat in the men's doubles, partnered by L. Creight. They lost to A. W. Gore and W. H. Roper Barrett, 6-1, 6-2, 6-2. Miss Joan Fry, youthful English star, was eliminated from the women's singles by Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, former United States champion, 6-4, 7-5.

Miss Elizabeth Ryan and Mary K. Browne, of California, went three sets to triumph over Miss I. Maltby and Mrs. H. C. Broadbridge, 6-1, 2-6, 6-2.

Alki Merchants To Inaugurate Summer Baseball Programme

To-morrow's Feature to be Followed by Full Schedule of Week-end Games

Sons of Canada and Travelers Will Oppose Visitors in Double-header

When the Alki Merchants baseball club of Seattle visit the city to-morrow to play local teams they will usher in a programme of similar attractions which the senior league has arranged for this Summer.

It has been the policy of the local league in past years to bring in as many outside teams as possible. This year they will attempt to have a team in practically every week-end.

To-morrow the Alki Merchants will be here. On the Saturday following, July 3, the Pantages nine, also of Seattle, will make their first appearance here. For this occasion another doubleheader has been fixed. The Eagles will take a crack at an out-of-town team for the first time this season when they oppose the Pantages outfit in both games.

The games to-morrow will commence at 2 o'clock sharp, when the Sons of Canada will trot out their lineup against the Merchants. At the same time the Sons and Lidstone will step out against the Seattle squad, one admission being charged for both games. Perfit will pitch for the Sons and Lidstone will probably twirl for the samplemen.

Alki Merchants are considered to have one of the best teams in the city. They are a well-balanced outfit and are at present hard on the heels of the leaders.

Eight Errors Are Deciding Factors In Sons' Victory

Travelers Outbatted Sops But Too Many Bobbles Gave Them 13-7 Win

Samplemen Blew in Fourth and Let in Six Runs on Two Hits; Thomas Hit Homer

Again, the Sons of Canada, although outbatted by their opponents, profited by misuses and gained the victory. It was the Travelers, who last night at the Royal Athletic Park, failed to down the cocky league-leaders. The final count was 13-7. Their victory gave the Sons a full three game advantage in the league standing, with seven wins out of nine starts.

But six hits were registered off Noble, who dished them up for the Sons. It was the eight misplays which did the dirty work. Unless some team can find a way to check themselves when the Sons start to come on a rampage, it looks as if they are going to cop the league-honors. In the fourth session they squeezed in but two safe singles. But four errors made up for lack of punch and six runners scored. Up to that time the Travelers had been leading but their apple-cart was upset completely and down they went.

Mostly picking out Noble for the Sons, took his departure in the first inning. Three walks and two hits were his finish. Parfitt, who replaced him, worked a few more safe singles, walked two and struck out four. Noble fanned seven and walked five.

Travelers Start Early

Jack Noble had the Sons batters guessing until the fourth inning, when he batted them out. He allowed only six runners scored. Up to that time the Travelers had been leading but their apple-cart was upset completely and down they went.

APITOL THEATRE IS EXPERT DRESSMAKER

Making overalls dresses fit in a twinkling is an art deftly illustrated by Colleen Moore in her latest cinematic opus, "Ella Cinders," now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

Suppose a party impends and daughter finds no suitable gown available for one reason or another. Let her follow the example of Ella Cinders, who drapes on her slight person an evening dress which a girl of twice her size might have fitted with comfort—and makes it look like a million dollars!

This knack, so aptly revealed in the new John McCormick production for First National, is one of many unusual touches that serve to make "Ella Cinders" one of the most unusual films of the year.

LOVE AND INTRIGUE
DOMINION THEATRE

Romantic castles in Europe; devious intrigues in a European court; the romance of royal loves and bartering for kingdoms; these all come to life in the film adaptation of George Barr McCutcheon's famous novel, "Beverly of Graustark," presented by Cosmopolitan as Marion Davies' latest starring vehicle, and now playing at the Dominion Theatre.

The famous novel is filmed with characters that were hand-picked to follow the spirit of the author's famous tale, and thrills, romance, comedy, and the poignant tang of modern court intrigue run through it.

Not many people in the audience of "yesterday" have forgotten the team of Murray and Mack which appeared in "The Midnight Flyer" and in Irish musical comedies.

Some years ago the partnership split. Charles Murray went into the film and became one of the well-

GROMAKOVSKY
GIVEN OVATIONRussian Vocalist Made Great Impression at Crystal Garden Last Night

One of the most outstanding recitals for some time was that of last evening when Vasily Gromakovsky, the distinguished Russian baritone, gave a recital in the banquet hall of the Crystal Garden. From the very opening number of a diversified and exacting programme of five groups, he became an instant favorite and throughout the evening there were times when he received veritable ovations.

Here is a singer, who not only arouses in his listeners moments of great pleasure, but his "songs" become sublimely interesting, whose essentials in purport and significance are encompassed with rare ability and consummate artistry. He is a master of style, dramatic in utterance, searching in emotion, and charming in his perfect treatment and delivery, and is always lucid in sense of light and shade, combined with an intellectuality of a very high order.

SCENE IS TAKEN IN OFFICE OF NEW YORK'S
FAMOUS POLICEWOMAN

One of the most interesting incidents in "Lilies of the Streets," the Metropolitan policewoman's picture, includes Mrs. Mary E. Hamilton, New York's famous and first policewoman, in her official character. The scene is laid in Mrs. Hamilton's office in the Woman's Precinct, said to be the only one in the United States. Dramatic as it is, depicting the impending climax in a young girl's tragic history, it was such a scene as the friendly walls had looked down upon with Mrs. Hamilton in the same kindly, sympathetic spirit and the girl playing in real life the character so cleverly acted in "Lilies of the Streets" by Ruth Harrison. Showing this week at the Playhouse.

STORY OF RAILROAD AT COLUMBIA MAKES SPECTACULAR FEATURE

With a roar of giant drivers and a shrieking of steam, "The Midnight Flyer" pulled into town yesterday, and will be seen from now on for a few days shooting across the screen of the Columbia Theatre, at a speed something in excess of seven-tenths an hour! It is filled with stirring, well-staged fights, for which director Tom Forman is to be commended, and the climax works up to a battle in the cab of an engine traveling a mile a minute, which is a corker. Incidentally this is preceded by a race between a freight train and a runaway special train on parallel tracks.

EASIER TO BUY
CAR THAN TO SELL
SHOW INDICATES

With a large cast of thirteen, "Six-Cylinder Love" at the Coliseum is a notable production. It is always easier to buy a car than to sell one, and in this very lively comedy the happy ending is made possible by the timely arrival of the janitor to write a cheque for $1,000 and take the car. The janitor is a careful man who before buying a six-cylinder has provided his wife with a more indispensable though smaller and different kind of buggy—and the young married man decides to follow this excellent example. The play shows in admirably drawn characters, and is thoroughly well acted with the whole presentation bearing the unmistakable polish which is the mark of the Coliseum producer. The settings, too, are admirable with a big Chrysler purring about the stage. The show is altogether one of high entertainment value, and makes a visit to the popular Government Street theatre well worth while.

Two society women were discussing the romance of a friend.

"Dorothy is very devoted to him, isn't she?" observed one.

"She's head over heels in love with him," was the rejoinder. "She's stopped drinking, she's stopped smoking, and she's stopped swearing, all for his sake."

FAME'S COST? "NERVES," SAYS GLORIOUS GLORIA

Envied Film Queen Battles Illness While She Makes Last Picture Before Promised Rest

By GENE COHN

Glorious Gloria Swanson, grand lady and hoyden of the screen, is playing her off-stage scenes under the direction of the leading nerve specialists.

The battle she has waged, and is now waging in the face of great physical odds, constitutes one of the most human "inside" stories of the films.

It was a worn, harassed and wistfully appealing Gloria who revealed chapters hitherto unknown to all but her intimates in an exclusive interview.

The circumstances that led to this interview are no secret to "the trade." All filmdom has buzzed for weeks about the "unheard-of goings-on" of the million-dollar star.

Day upon day, it is known, half a hundred extras have idled on the set of "Fine Manners," which is to be Miss Swanson's last picture before joining the exclusive circle of United Features. They have stretched out on benches, sleeping, chatting and drawing their pay. A $2,500-a-week male star has also caught up considerable sleep and drawn considerable extra pay. And Miss Swanson's salary has gone on at $1,000 a day.

About four in the afternoon her car has drawn up, whereas work is supposed to begin at around 10 o'clock in the morning.

The picture is said to have cost $450,000 thus far, due to delays, and the end is not yet in sight.

"What can I do?" asks Gloria, frankly putting her cards upon the table.

"For ten years I worked to reach my position. The fact is that my doctors have told me if I go through the usual arduous day of film work I'll collapse. And no one knows better than I how truly they speak."

"The world knows how close I was to death in Paris last year. I came back terribly weakened. And yet I known comedy and character players. Mack stayed with the stage.

The other day, in the First National studios, Charles Murray walked and given one being the being taken. He bumped square into Ollie Mack! Unknown to either, they had been selected to play the comedy roles.

Thus an old-time "team" was reunited.

L. Barrymore As Skipper in Sea Spectacle

Technical apparatus, adapted to theatrical purposes, has finally caught up sufficiently with the outstripping imagination of Jules Verne to depict his fantastic "Mysterious Island," written many decades ago, and his submarine novel, "Under the Sea," which are to be combined in a grand romantic spectacle.

The production, estimated to cost $500,000, will be the last of the series of films under Maurice Tourneur's direction, in collaboration with J. E. Williamson, whose submarine filming device will be used.

Hollywood's talked-about people, as the newcomer soon learns, buy their notices and laudations at so much per week from shrewd and indefatigable press agents. These are the middlemen in the traffic of film fame. Without them Hollywood may harbor even a Grange unsung and all but unrecognized.

PANORAMIC PICTURE OF CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION DELEGATES

DR. F. G. BANTING APPEALS TO CANADIANS TO SUPPORT MULLOCK RESEARCH FUND

older members of the medical profession, had they their lives to live over again, would keep systematic and accurate records of their cases so that this wealth of clinical data could be accurately set forth as a basis of diagnosis, of prognosis and of the relative value of various forms of treatment. Records such as these would also contain a description of the unusual responses after the administration of drugs; the effects of infectious diseases to support the case; the gradual development of disease; and the particular form of treatment with its result, beneficial or otherwise. At the time that these records were made they might not appear of value, but memory is variable and inaccurate, and the written record is useful not only for the present but for all time. As an example of the accuracy of memory, Saunders tells the following story of Sir Lawson Tait. Tait made the statement at the Midland Medical Society meeting that he had done one thousand colporrhaphies. Dr. Taylor, a junior on Tait's staff, took exception to the number of operations. Tait challenged Taylor to count from the hospital records and to report at the next meeting of the society. The hospital records showed that one hundred and twenty-eight colporrhaphies had been done by Tait. Tait's reply was, "There may be a slight discrepancy in figures, but the facts are the same."

Every number of the British Medical Journal contains short reports of unusual cases and experiences of physicians. The Canadian Medical Association Journal should encourage this practice amongst physicians. These reports may have a threefold benefit. They help the patient, because the physician makes a more thorough and systematic investigation if he purposes to report the case. They help the physician because in his working out of the case he gains experience and information. They help the reader because they give him the benefit of the other man's experience.

The general practitioner may feel that he can do but little because he has not adequate laboratory facilities. The public health laboratories scattered through the various provinces endeavor to supply this need. But even without laboratory assistance medical research can be carried on for its principles are the same inside or outside of the laboratory. The fundamental principle of medical research is observation and the laboratory is only secondary to the bedside clinical examination.

Fothergill gives a vivid picture based on observation of the chronic bronchitis, as the following extracts show:

"In the out-patient department of Chest Hospital, the old bronchitic people are still to be seen, a considerable proportion of the whole. With labored respiration and tardy step they enter pining and panting, scant of breath, which makes the speech difficult; while a significant shake of the head often tells more eloquently than words of the labored condition, and that the breathing is embarrassed. Words they avoid, for the entrance of air often provokes a paroxysm of coughing, and this causes them much distress. They excite one's compassion, albeit they occupy a great deal of time to little effect; for they are apt to be stupid and to comprehend badly, these folk. Their brains are not very bright with the imperfectly oxygenated blood circulating through them."

"In the wards of the workhouse infirmary they are to be met in great quantity; usually kept in the beds when the other patients are up in the day-rooms, usually on their backs, or sitting propped up with pillows. They are quiet people, not having no pain to spare; and if they have to talk, they take a long inspiration before commencing. The abdominal character of their respiration is seen that at the moment of inspiration the pectoral muscles pull from. No folded arms across the chest in repose do these folk practice. If walking, they stop to talk or answer a question, and the arm is thrown on to the nearest object for the same purpose of fixing the shoulder."

METHOD OF DIAGNOSIS

This description illustrates the method used for diagnosis by the physicians of the older school. Today, when a patient suffering with chronic bronchitis is admitted to hospital a thorough clinical examination is made which may include, inspection, palpitation, percussion, auscultation, red blood count, white blood count, differential count of eosinophiles and polymorphonuclear leucocytes, estimation of haemoglobin, blood sugar, blood cholesterol, complete urinalysis, bacteriological examination of sputum and X-Ray examinations. These purely mechanical and chemical devices for diagnosis are apt to be over-emphasized in modern medical teaching. Even in practice more and more reliance is being placed on X-Ray and laboratory tests. And as a result of these mechanical methods the physician of to-day is doing less thinking and making fewer observations. The older school had not the advantages of the modern school, but the modern school should not overlook the older methods.

Sometimes the most trivial observations are accepted without question, whereas they may prove to be extraordinary in that they may lead to the solution of fundamental principles. Apples had been falling since Adam and Eve left Eden, but it was not till Newton questioned this ordinary occurrence that the fundamental principle of gravitation was revealed. Since Laennec introduced the stethoscope thousands of physicians have listened to the human heart, and she immediately observed, "I cannot take that disease for I have had cowpox." This remark fell upon the ears of Edward Jenner. It inspired him to perform experiments which resulted in vaccination being adopted as a preventive against smallpox.

Jenner may have known of a certain farmer, Benjamin Jesty of Yelmer in Dorset, who in 1774 successfully protected his family against smallpox by vaccinating them with cowpox. If he did it is further proof that the medical profession should not be above scientific facts regardless of their source. Lay people of to-day frequently come forward with such suggestions as "Workers in smallpox and factory die of cancer"; "Natives of the Malay States never have appendicitis"; "Natives of St. Domingo, whose diet consists almost exclusively of sugar cane, never have diabetes." These ordinary observations are causing medical men to think and investigate.

A few generations ago epidemics of diphtheria were common and were considered almost inevitable. One of the treatments frequently used consisted in placing a thick slice of fat pork sprinkled with cayenne pepper on the throat, a child I remember a small century, long since disused, on the outskirts of my home town. This cemetery was the result of an epidemic of diphtheria. Previous to this epidemic there had been no need of a cemetery but the large number of deaths in a short space of time necessitated hasty burial.

ANTI-TYPHOID VACCINE

Another example of the control of epidemics shown by comparison is in deaths from typhoid in the Boer War and the Great War. Wright, by his discovery of anti-typhoid vaccine, has, within a few years, reduced typhoid fever, altogether, $248 died of the disease, in other words, more died of typhoid than were killed in action or died of wounds. In the Great War, 420,000 men served for four years and three months; out of every 1,000, only one contracted typhoid fever; altogether there were only fourteen deaths from the disease in the whole Canadian army during the entire war.

Through the energetic activities of public health organizations infectious diseases such as diphtheria, measles, scarlet fever and typhoid have been fairly well controlled, and are not causing the loss of human life which they did in past decades. The great problems of the present day are the chronic diseases.

VITAL STATISTICS

The latest available vital statistics for the Dominion of Canada are those of 1925 in which year the population was 4,423,000. These figures do not include Quebec as the statistics of this province are not given. The total deaths from all causes in this year were 70,132, of these 7,491 were due to diseases of the heart, 3,184 to diseases of the arteries and 2,472 to nephritis; or the immense total of 13,127 deaths due to cardio-vascular renal diseases; whereas pneumonia caused 6,237, cancer 5,137 and tuberculosis 4,481. It is true that physicians in signing the death certificate may favor disease of the heart as the cause of death and that in some cases the primary cause of death is due to other ailments, but this immense figure given for cardio-vascular renal diseases is surely a challenge for medical research. It would be interesting to know if the prevalent removal of teeth, tonsils, appendix and other foci of infection from which inflammatory rheumatism and endocarditis are supposed to arise, will have any effect on the future incidence of cardiac deaths. Cancer, dreadful as it is, accounted for less than one-half as many deaths as cardiac diseases.

From these statistics it is seen that we must gain more knowledge of the cause, course, and treatment of cardio-vascular renal diseases. This can only come about by the concentrated effort of the general practitioner, who, unlike the specialist, has the patient constantly under his care and supervision. The greatest single contribution in this direction was made by a general practitioner. I refer to the work of Sir James Mackenzie.

MONUMENT TO MEDICAL SCIENCE

Advancing civilization introduces new problems in disease which challenge medical science. The white man desired materials from the tropics; he wanted his coffee, rubber and bananas, which only grew in the tropics. But tropical diseases prevented his advance. For commercial purposes the white man required a canal through Central America to connect the Atlantic with the Pacific. French engineers commenced the construction but were forced to abandon it because of hookworm, yellow fever and malaria. The present Panama Canal is a monument not only to modern engineering but to medical science. During the summer of 1924 the delegates of the International Health Conference passed over approximately 120 miles of railroad which is said to have cost heart, but it was not till MacKenzie learned to interpret the meaning of the changing sounds that we were given a firm basis for treatment and prognosis of organic diseases of the heart. Mosquitoes had been buzzing and biting thousands of years before Sir Ronald Ross attached to them the blame of transmitting malaria. As early as 1775 there was a common saying among peasants in England that those who had had cowpox would never take smallpox. In the little town of Sodbury, near Bristol, a young country woman came to seek advice. The subject of smallpox was mentioned in her presence and she immediately observed, "I cannot take that disease for I have had cowpox." This remark fell upon the ears of Edward Jenner. It inspired him to perform experiments which resulted in vaccination being adopted as a preventive against smallpox.

New industries introduced new factors in the medical care of workmen. Mining with its drilling and blasting, and its extraction of minerals with poisonous acids, and industries where lead, arsenic and antimony are used, have given rise to the creation of a special department in medicine. The proportionate increase in the population of the cities with the consequent agglomeration of citizens has only been made possible by control of epidemics and through the development of sanitation and public health organization. The modern living conditions in large cities frequently produce malnutrition and general debility amongst children of all ages and classes, thus giving rise to new problems for the medical profession.

To-day pernicious anemia, organic disease of the heart, cancer, pneumococcal peritonitis, and Addison's disease, and almost the whole category of mental derangement are being accepted as incurable. Let us hope that a few generations will come when at least these conquered by medical science.

Problems involving a whole disease can best be undertaken in a university because of the libraries, their laboratory facilities and, greatest of all, because of the advice and guidance of outstanding men at the head of teaching departments. Few of these problems can be solved in any one department, and they therefore require co-operation among various departments. The work on insulin was commenced in the department of physiology, valuable assistance and advice was received from the department of biochemistry, the biochemistry laboratory provided facilities for the experimental work on extraction; clinical investigation was undertaken by the department of medicine; and the least amongst those who co-operated was the professor of pharmacology.

RESEARCH WORK

Medical colleges of Canada are all engaged in research. Much of this seeks to throw light upon fundamental problems and because of its very nature may not appear to have immediate practical importance, but it is always valuable. An example of this is the researches on the different types of diphtheria bacilli by the late Dr. Westbrooke, who was at one time president of the University of British Columbia. His classical description of types is the standard for bacteriological laboratories throughout the world. The numerous workers on the morphology of red blood cells, and the chemical workers on the estimation of salts in small quantities of the blood, could not see any practical application of their researches, yet the knowledge that they acquired now forms the groundwork for the clinical investigation on pernicious anemia in progress at Winnipeg under the auspices of the Gordon Bell Memorial.

When a Canadian visits the medical centres of the United States he is struck by the money and facilities at the disposal of the workers. When we contrast the facilities offered in our own centres we cannot blame the ambitious Canadian who sacrifices nationality for opportunity. The last number of The University of Toronto Monthly showed that eighty-seven per cent of the graduates in medicine last year entered hospitals, and of these forty-three per cent went to the United States. When we contemplate the attainments achieved by Canadians living in the United States we realize what we have lost and are losing through lack of suitable provision for the graduates of our universities.

In the endeavor to overcome this national problem a group of business and university men, headed by Sir William Mullock, have collected $250,000, the interest of which is to be devoted to support workers under the Research Foundation. This foundation seeks to assist those who readily obtain assistance from other sources. It is not confined to workers in the University of Toronto or other universities. Its aim is to promote the carrying out of medical research by the men who have the ideas, by providing them with the necessary facilities.

In conclusion I may urge the Canadian physicians from ocean to ocean to join in a united effort which has as its aim the prevention and alleviation of human suffering, the maintenance of health and the prolongation of human life. May the medical profession itself show its health and vitality by the production of new ideas which will be freely given to the world at large.

No one had the right to intervene between the judge and execution of his sentence, said the speaker. If the House released the Government from responsibility in this case, said Mr. Meighen, its contribution to the education of public opinion would be that justice in Canada stood at the mercy of politicians alone.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

Mr. Meighen said he wished to draw attention to the fact that R. P. Sparks in his evidence had declared ninety per cent of the smuggling that had been carried on could have been prevented by proper application of the law on the part of the department.

Mr. Meighen charged it had never been the practice to appoint a royal commission before dismissing a civil servant, but Premier King had demanded that specific charges be made against the former customs officer, Bisillon, "before he would appoint a royal commission."

"Why had such solicitude been shown for Bisillon?" he asked.

CONSERVATIVE EFFORT

Hon. Lucien Cannon, Solicitor-General, was the next speaker. The report of the committee had been widely received, but politics had been introduced through Mr. Stevens' amendment in an attempt to destroy the work of the committee, he said. The Conservatives were saying at this time, "Let us introduce a moral question in the dying days of the session."

It should be remembered, Mr.

Cannon continued, that a measure designed to curtail illegal liquor transactions in British Columbia had been "murdered in the Senate" at the instigation of the leader of the Conservative Party.

The Solicitor-General dealt with Mr. Bolvin's part in the inquiry. The Minister of Customs was "too honest to deal with honorable gentlemen opposites," said Mr. Cannon, and if Mr. Stevens had been minister, Mr. Cannon doubted if the Robichaud letter about Moses Axis would ever have been produced. The fact these documents had been handed over to the committee showed how anxious Mr. Bolvin had been to assist in every way.

POLITICAL MOVE

A. W. Neil, Independent, Comox-Alberni, described the Conservative amendment as a "political move" in which Parliament was asked to vote the Liberal Government out of office. If the administration was defeated an election would take place. Mr. Neil stated he intended by his vote to show the good opinion he had of the ability of the Minister of Customs.

M. N. Campbell, Progressive, Mackenzie, Saskatchewan, moved adjournment of the debate.

THE MOTIONS

The motion for adoption of the report was made by Paul Meserle, chairman of the committee of inquiry. The Conservative amendment, moved by Hon. H. H. Stevens, Conservative, Vancouver Centre, is designed to cause the Government and Hon. G. H. Bolvin, Minister of Customs. The sub-amendment moved by J. S. Woodsworth, Labor, Winnipeg North Centre, would eliminate from the Stevens amendment the censure of the Government and Mr. Bolvin and make as his chief recommendations:

1. That a judicial commission be appointed to investigate administration of the Customs Department.

2. That the name of R. R. Farrow, Deputy Minister of Customs, be added to the list of those whose services should be disposed of.

BIRDS AND GIRLS

"Birds of a feather flock together. But they don't. A girl with a beautiful fair skin and red hair marries a man who looks like a reformed orange-ouster. A clergyman makes a friend of an auctioneer and a banker would rather spend a day with an Adirondack fishing guide than with a whole vaultful of bankers. Forgers in their time off sing in the choir, and choirmasters when they are not singing themselves."—Stephen Leacock.

PICK SIMPLE, SMART CLOTHES FOR TRAVEL, DESIGNER ADVISES

Serious Problem Now Arises For Those Planning Summer Trip

By HENRI BENDEL
Noted Fashion Designer

"What clothes do I need for my trip?"

Here is a question I have been answering many times a day for weeks—apparently everyone is going on a trip, if only for a three weeks' vacation.

For the short stay, I always advise comfortable, light weight, easily packed clothes. Trunks are a great nuisance and you can never be sure, once you surrender them, just when you will see them again.

NEVER BE DULL

Traveling clothes should be easy to get into, simple of line, and made so they do not always call for fresh collars and cuffs, or added accessories. They should not be sketchedly put together so they are always needing a few stitches here and there. You don't want to bother with clothes that call for much upkeep.

But traveling clothes should never be dull or routine, because your appearance is extremely important. You are constantly meeting people who will judge you quickly, often by your clothes, because short trips give others no chance to learn your sterling value by long association.

Your trip is bound to be pleasant if your clothes are smart and well selected, sufficiently numerous to take care of ordinary social engagements, but wisely limited to economical packing space.

The three outfits photographed today were designed especially for the traveler, to fit her special needs. First I direct your attention to the wool suit with the short jacket which is admirable for boat wear as well as for traveling by motor, and is most unusual in color and treatment. It is extremely flowerlike and lovely in a shade that is between wisteria and orchid. The blouse and the swaggar scarf are of matching crepe de chine, and the hat is of light grey perle straw with a cocarde of grey gros grain ribbon.

To my way of thinking, this is infinitely preferable to the conventional tan or dark mixture tweed suits that are so frequently selected and so obviously practical for traveling.

Ensemble costumes are decidedly advantageous because they have that finished completeness that a limited wardrobe seldom affords and that careful dressing demands. The model beside the suit has a most flattering combination of colors—navy blue and old rose.

The beltless frock is of old rose crepe and the coat of navy blue georgette. Rose crepe lines the jacket, and across the hips is a band of blue georgette in which are pockets of the crepe in the shape of leaves.

On the ends of the long scarf are bands of blue crepe, and the hem-band is of blue. This frock makes a charming afternoon gown without the wrap. The softly draped hat of rose felt is a very wise choice in millinery.

Black and tan form the color scheme of the other ensemble which is smart as well as serviceable. The sleeveless coat is worn over a frock of tan crepe with black cuff and pointed insets which run from the wrist to the elbow. The black suede belt and the graceful cape are both added touches of smartness for the coat.

Naturally, the wardrobe for a European trip will include a smart and moderately heavy top coat to wear on the boat, and dinner and evening gowns as well as simple smart frocks for day.

TABLE MANNERS

The hostess is served first at a formal dinner in order that the guests may "follow suit" her manner of handling the food, and in order that she may give any necessary directions to the servant about it. A teaspoon is never left in a cup and no beverage is sipped from the spoon. The spoon is merely for stirring and one first sip from the cup. Bread is broken into small pieces before buttering. Salad is cut only with the fork.

WHITEX

Almost like magic

FOR 50 years bluing was good enough—but now comes Whitex. Whitex is not a bleach—nor a dye, nor a bluing—but a scientific compound for whitening clothes. Without harming even the most delicate or fine things—Whitex leaves them pure and white—without blue spots or streaks. To use Whitex simply shake it into what you formerly called your "rinse or bluing water". For restoring the whiteness of fabrics which have become dingy or yellow—Whitex acts almost like magic. You can use Whitex with perfect assurance that it will not injure anything—no matter how sheer or fine or delicate.

Use Whitex next washday—you will not be without it again.

Roe Wins Battle With Big Fish and Brings Him to Town

The salmon now running are big fellows and vicious fighters, but if you stick to them long enough you can land one, according to E. P. Fitzgerald, Roe, stock broker and fishing sportsman.

Fishing off Ten Mile Point with C. H. L. Branson Monday evening, Mr. Roe had the experience of having his tested copper line seized by a fish so powerful that it snapped the line. He went out trolling in the same waters Tuesday night and lost another heavy copper line in the same way. Repetition of such an experience annoyed him, so last night he went out with a rope strong enough to moor a vessel. He had not been out long when there was a fish on the end of the rope. Mr. Roe made things fast and prepared for battle. The battle lasted for thirty-five minutes, at the end of which time the fish was still on the hook. Still in the boat, Mr. Roe was exhausted. The fish realized that Mr. Roe could not be beaten three nights running and completely exhausted gave himself up.

Mr. Roe got a Ford car to bring the fish into town. It was a speckled-tail spring salmon and as exhibited to the crowds on View Street, weighed 34½ pounds.

BICYCLES NEARLY RUINED OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

ONCE upon a time there was a widespread fear that bicycles were going to be the ruin of this country.

This was back when the new models, as shown in the picture, rendered obsolete the old style bicycles, which had one large and one small wheel. It easily may be seen that the two ladies above were members of the younger generation—which was going to the dogs.

That a strange thing about younger generations—they always are going to the how wows. Yet they never get there.

These young ladies would hop upon their speedy contraptions and startle the village by dashing past the general store.

They went so fast they didn't even have time to say to the group out front, "How's Willie's menials?" or "Is it hot enough for you?"

Sometimes they would slow down enough to say "Howdy," but most of the time they just waved as they rushed past on their way to perdition.

Pedestrians, accustomed to dodging only horses and buggies, feared for their lives when a "scorcher" approached.

The sound of the bells upon the handle bars disturbed the peace of the land. Folks couldn't sleep well nights. Sometimes the riders could be heard long after bedtime—eight or nine o'clock.

The world always is going to the dogs. Yet it never does arrive.

CANADA SEED MEN COMING NEXT YEAR

Members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association are coming to British Columbia next year for their annual convention, Dr. Warnock, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, announced today, following a message from Dr. Cecil Tice of the Department of Agriculture's staff, who is now at Ottawa on his way back from this year's convention at MacDonald College, Quebec.

Dr. Tice has been in the East as the official representative of British Columbia and is accompanied by George A. Robinson of Elk Lake, representing the B.C. growers.

"This year's convention has been under President C. H. Zavitz of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph."

In just what part of B.C. the convention will be held next year is to be decided later, Dr. Warnock said.

HEART DISEASE NOW GREATEST KILLER IN U.S.

Washington, June 25.—Heart disease is supplanting tuberculosis as the greatest "disease man-killer," according to figures for 1924 published by the United States Public Health Service.

Total deaths from heart disease during that year were 176,671 or a ratio of 178.4 per 100,000 population. Tuberculosis during the same period took a toll of 99,742 deaths, or at the rate of 90.6 per 100,000.

Pneumonia also has passed tuberculosis as a death-dealing disease. During the year 97,403 deaths were reported from this cause, or at the ratio of 94.4 per 100,000.

Carrying Anthrax

QUARANTINE regulations of the Public Health Service require the disinfection of hair shipped into this country that is to be used for shaving brushes, and the service has published information regarding the disinfection of wool, hides and skins in its fight on anthrax.

It investigates cases of human anthrax for the purpose of determining the source of infection and to prevent subsequent infections from the same source.

In the external form of anthrax, a minute swelling appears at the seat of infection, and develops into a vesicle containing serum or bloody matter, and varying in size, usually not larger than a quarter.

This vesicle soon bursts and leaves an ulcerated, or sloughing surface, around which are numerous smaller vesicles which undergo similar changes, and the whole affected part becomes hard and tender, while the surrounding surface and neighboring lymphatic glands become inflamed.

This condition, often termed "malignant pustule," is accompanied by severe constitutional disturbance, such as fever, delirium, perspiration and great prostration, and a tendency to death from septicemia. Recovery is not uncommon, however.

Intestinal anthrax is contracted from the eating of meat of diseased animals. The intestinal form of the disease is somewhat rare, but usually rapidly fatal.

Pulmonary anthrax results from the inhalation of infected material.

In animals, anthrax may be conveyed by the bite of a fly or the sting of an insect, or it may be contracted by grazing in pastures contaminated by the anthrax germ.

GOODYEAR'S Proudest Sales

THE fact that Goodyears are the largest-selling tires in the world is naturally a matter of great pride with us.

But even more do we take pride in the fact that Goodyears lead in sales especially where tire use is the hardest.

In rural communities, with country roads—Goodyears lead.

In mountain districts, where roads are little more than trails—Goodyears lead.

In foreign lands far less blessed with good roads than even our far corners—Goodyears lead.

In countries where thrift is a matter of life itself—Goodyears lead.

In many of these countries Goodyears cost more than tires of their own make—but Goodyear mileage is so much greater that the last cost is lower.

You, who can buy Goodyear Tires for no more than you are asked to pay for other brands, are fortunate.

And with them you receive the services of your Goodyear Selected Dealer. See him.

BROTHER RELATES STORY OF FINDING BODY OF AVIATOR

C. E. Favor Arrived Here Yesterday Afternoon With Body of M. B. Favor

Badly Decomposed Body of Seattle Airman Found at San Jose Bay

Details of the finding of the body of M. B. Favor, Seattle aviator, who was drowned when his seaplane was wrecked on the West Coast of Vancouver Island were learned yesterday afternoon upon the arrival of his brother, C. E. Favor, from the West Coast aboard the steamer Burna, which arrived at the William Head quarantine station at 3.15 o'clock.

Although the party searched the coastline thoroughly no trace was found of the body of R. W. Swinehart, the airman who accompanied C. E. Favor. The aviators were on their way to spot salmon for a large cannery in Alaska.

In telling the tragic story of the finding of his brother's body, Mr. Favor stated that after leaving Seattle the party was delayed by bad weather but eventually reached San Jose Bay in a launch. After landing the party spread out and commenced to search among the rocks and in the surrounding woods. Constable Williams of the Provincial Police and Customs Officer B. W. Leeson, who had been searching around the wreckage, came across the boat belonging to R. W. Swinehart.

Not far from where this discovery was made the body of C. E. Favor was found in a badly decomposed state. Around his body was tied a rope which stretched out into the bay for a distance of about seventy-five yards, the other end being entwined in a bed of kelp. It is thought that the two aviators tied themselves together with the rope, with the intention of helping one another.

The body of Mr. Favor was wrapped into a blanket and taken back to Port Alice. There being no morgue there, the slaughter house was used for this purpose and with the assistance of one of the white workers at Port Alice C. E. Favor built a coffin.

Mr. Favor took the body of his brother to Seattle yesterday afternoon, where burial will take place.

SCHEDULE OF SS. AUSTRALIA IS CANCELLED

Canadian Pacific Ship Will be Sent to England From Nagasaki

Vessel Will be Re-engined at Glasgow and Operated on Atlantic

The Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Australia, scheduled to arrive here June 30 from the Orient, as the outcome of engine trouble developed while in Oriental waters, has been withdrawn from the North Pacific service and will not again be seen on this coast.

It was announced to-day by Capt. Edward Beetham, superintendent of C.P.R. steamships on the Pacific, that the inbound sailing of the Empress of Australia has been cancelled and that the vessel will proceed direct to England from Nagasaki, where she recently put in for temporary repairs.

The vessel's passengers will be transferred to the Empress of Asia. At the last annual meeting of the Canadian Pacific shareholders it was decided to re-engine the Australia in order to give her more speed. She is then to be placed on the Atlantic run. The Fairfield Shipbuilding & Engineering Company of Glasgow have been awarded the contract. The Australia was formerly the German steamship Tirpitz and was built at Stettin in 1914.

TWO FREIGHTERS ARE DUE HERE LATE TO-NIGHT

Two freighters, the Norwegian steamship Niels Nielson and the Japanese vessel Kongosan Maru are both due off Roca Rocks at midnight to-night, according to word received this morning by King Brothers, local agents.

They will dock at the Ogden Point piers early in the morning and to-morrow will commence loading lumber cargo. The Niels Nielson will take on approximately 700,000 feet, consigned to the Japanese port of Nagoya. The Kongosan Maru will load—close to 155,000 feet of Japanese squares.

proceed direct to England from Nagasaki, where she recently put in for temporary repairs.

The vessel's passengers will be transferred to the Empress of Asia. At the last annual meeting of the Canadian Pacific shareholders it was decided to re-engine the Australia in order to give her more speed. She is then to be placed on the Atlantic run. The Fairfield Shipbuilding & Engineering Company of Glasgow have been awarded the contract. The Australia was formerly the German steamship Tirpitz and was built at Stettin in 1914.

AVIATOR WILL SURVEY ISLAND TIMBER LANDS

D. R. McLaren of Pacific Airways Co. Will Visit Victoria During Journey

Vancouver, June 25.—D. R. McLaren, vice-president of the Pacific Airways Company, who recently launched a newly-equipped flying boat here, expects to make his first lengthy voyage in the new machine next week.

According to present plans, he and a forestry engineer will make an extensive survey of Vancouver Island timber lands. They will leave Vancouver next Monday morning and make their first stop at Menzies Bay, Vancouver Island. From there it is planned to fly north and swing back to Great Central Lake. The next leg will take them to the West Coast. Victoria will be the next stop, and Nanaimo will be visited before the nose of the machine is pointed towards Vancouver on the homeward trip.

Seattle Shipping

Seattle, June 25.—The Argonaut liner Clausen, which arrived here yesterday from the Atlantic Coast, brought 1,700 tons of general cargo, including a shipment of wheat through Seattle, and a shipment of steel rails consigned to the B.C. Electric Company.

Bringing east coast freight, the Argonaut liner Santa Cecilia is expected here July 12 and 14.

At a meeting yesterday of Seattle port commissioners, plans and recommendations for changes in a city grain elevator were adopted. The intended alterations will double the receiving and shipping capacity of the plant. George B. Lamping, president of the port commission, stated that arrangements had been made with wheat exporters for providing for shipment of between 6,000,000 and 10,000,000 debating whether to retire him or Cummins on the latter's grounders, both runners were safe. Cuppage was also too slow to throw Dunn out at first. When Fetherstone failed to tag Noble's throw on Holman's bounding roller both Cummins and Dunn scored. Cuppage got in the way of the first ball pitched to him and went to first. The team was fine and Sallaway did his share with a single over second base. Holman made the plate on this crack. McGinnis whiffed and Parfitt did like wise but his third strike was dropped and in the flurry to catch him going to the base Cuppage registered. Sallaway scored when More dropped Johnson's fly to right. Johnson was nipped going to second, ending the rally.

TRY AGAIN
The Travelers tried hard to regain the lost lead in their turn at bat and just failed by one run. Four solid blows, a double and three singles, drove two runs across in this session.

There was no stopping the natives after that fourth frame and they added runs in each of the remaining innings. Two in the fifth, two in the sixth and three in the seventh, the final inning. Two runs in the sixth was the gasp of the Travelers as they went down for the third time.

MORE HIT HARD

Bill More had a full slate as far as his hitting was concerned. Bill connected safely three times and was walked once in four trips to the rubber. Dunn got two hits out of three tries for the Sons. Fetherstone and Colin Campbell had a like record. Thomas skied a beautiful hit over the fence for homerun in the fifth. It was not needed.

Cuppage, the new find of the Sons, proved himself worthy of a place on the team. Although not getting any hits he did not strike out once.

New London, Conn., June 25—Harvard lowered Yale's rowing colors today for the first time in four years and made a sensational job of it by capturing both the morning races of the annual regatta.

The crimson junior varsity eight stroked its way to a five-lengths victory in a smashing battle after the Harvard freshmen had outclassed the blue yearlings in the opening contest, winning by three lengths from Yale's makeshift outfit.

CHARGE OF MURDER
Miami, Fla., June 25—William Andrews, thirty-six, a building contractor, of Winnipeg, died here last night from bullet wounds received at the hands of Jack Keeley, twenty-three, when Andrews entered the latter's tent Wednesday night. Keeley is under arrest on a warrant charging murder. Keeley told the police he had believed Andrews to be a burglar and fired before he had identified the intruder.

WOMAN'S BEAUTY
Millicent "just can't afford a manicure every week," and she asks me how to shine her own. Like this, Milly-for-short. Have a stiff nail brush, a thin file with round edge, emery board, sharp nail scissors, orange stick, two buffers, rose powder and paste, cuticle remover, soap, powdered pumice, and bleaching cream. Shape the nails with the file; if very long, cut with scissors before shaping; the shape fits the finger; oval nails for oval fingers.

MAYO CLINIC EXPERTS TALK TO CONVENTION

Drs. Willis Lemon and L. G. Rowntree Show Methods of Co-operative Diagnosis

Bronchial affections, and associated lung troubles were yesterday afternoon the subject of an illustrated lecture by Dr. Willis Lemon of the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., before the Canadian Medical Association convention at the Empress Hotel.

Dr. Lemon gave details of the best methods of using the bronchoscope, and told how joint examinations by allied specialists frequently brought solution of problems generally unsolvable by the individual specialist.

Dr. L. G. Rowntree also of the Mayo Clinic, discussed the progress of knowledge of kidney and liver diseases. He prefaced his address with an eulogy of the late Sir William Osler as "the greatest physician the New World has produced."

"In the study of the functions of the kidney unbelievable progress has been made in the past few years," Dr. Rowntree asserted, with an outline of the methods of studying this organ and its affections, the charts of the Mayo Clinic shown being given added interest by the assertion that "these methods have resulted in the saving of many lives in the last four years."

Dr. Rowntree considered "the ophthalmoscope should be used by every internist," declaring that in relation to cardio-renal diseases it is more important than the stethoscope.

The speaker believed that no organ of the human body is less understood or studied than the liver. He presented charts showing many new discoveries regarding the liver, and diagnosis aids to the physician seeking evidence of disease of the liver. He summarized these advances as "chiefly of value in showing us our ignorance of the liver."
The successful adoption of X-ray portraiture to study of the bladder, accomplished in recent years, was declared to be "a real contribution to medical practice," and Dr. Rowntree presented an array of curative elements, many of recent introduction which have been found of great value when properly used. He closed with a forecast that much attention by experimenters will be devoted to liver ailments in the next few years. Dr. Maude Abbott drew the attention of the convention to the Sir William Osler Memorial volume, her address being illustrated by lantern slides.
